400 Inspect Research Fields at Portageville

By LEO SCHADE

PORTAGEVILLE--The University of Missouri Delta Center field day tour drew more than 400 Thursday.

The tour six miles southeast of Portageville was in two parts morning and afternoon tour with five projects received in each.

Foremost were field projects, including a new cotton variety, a new Russian sunflower project, and continued work on a sugar beet project.

Weed control, irrigation, corn insects and tomato growing were explained in field demonstrations in the morning tour.

Cotton irrigation was outlined by Leonard Hand, meteorologist, Delta Center; a tomato breeding project, in charge of Hank DiCarlo, horticulture agent, Delta Center; control of weeks in cotton by Harold Kerr, weed control research, Delta Center; control of weeds in soybeans, Curtis Royster, technician research, Delta Center; and corn insects and virus disease control, Armon Keaster, corn entomologist research, Delta Center.

W. P. Sappenfield, cotton breeder research, Delta Center, explained the new Mo-Del cotton variety, now in its seventh year of experiment and to be released on the market next year. The plant has a high fiber texture, with a one and one-sixteenth staple length, and will produce under various types of seasons without high loss.

The plant has been crossed with other cotton varieties to obtain the greatest insect control, including the bollworm. The textile industry has long sought a new variety that would meet the demand of a competitive market and the new variety will provide a high quality fiber.

The new variety of sunflower seed project was shown with three types grown at the Center this year for the first time. The varieties have a high oil quality, which has been placed on the world market in competition with the soybean industry.

The varieties according to James A. Roth, soil fertility research, Delta Center, planted Mar. 27, were Semena and Armaveric. Peredovik, was planted June 15. The results will not be known until the fall harvest, but are said to produce 750-800 pounds oil per acre, and 400 pounds of hulls. Seed cost per acre is about $1.35. The crop would fit in following a wheat harvest.

The sugarbeet, Dr. Roth explained, is as high a quality in sugar content as is now grown in sugarbeet regions and the industry hopes to make the Bootheel one of their top future production areas. Production can be as high as 20 tons per acre and range in price from $15-$17. The tops have a high protein content for livestock feed.

Dr. William Bugbee, plant pathologist, discussed cotton seedling and best results in spacing of rows for production and disease control.

E.B. Nace, farm management agent Delta Center, demonstrated grain sorghum fields, which produced a market value comparable to corn. Bird resistant varieties were shown the tour group. Two crops can be planted in one year. Nace also explained soybean varieties.

Dr. Leo Duclos showed soybean experiment results over one to four year averages per acres. On the four-year average of 13 varieties, the production was from a low of 19.8 to 35.4 bushels; two year average on 16 varieties, 15.9 to 35.5 bushels, and 1967 average on 18 varieties from 18.6 to 33 bushels.

The experiments include a New York variety that had a three year average of 44.4 bushels per acre, but had no cyst nematode resistance.

Joe Scott, soil fertility research, Delta Center, explained a field soybean project, telling of the results of three planting dates, May 2, June 4 and July 8. The best early planting results were with 24-inch row spacing.

Wyoming mines nearly all the nation's bentonite, a vital clay used in steelmaking, and trona, an ingredient in glass, soap and paper.

Severe Weather Watch Formed for Sikeston

Twenty four persons joined a severe weather watch system network to protect the Sikeston area at a meeting of the Bootheel Citizen Band Radio club Thursday night at the Security National Bank.

By sighting a tornado 15 or more minutes before it strikes lives can be saved, Joseph A. Wunderlich, Poplar Bluff, curl defense captain, said. Even five minutes warning in an emergency can mean the difference between life and death. If a storm is reported all residents should tune-in to the local radio stations. Both Sikeston stations are equipped for early weather warning.

A system of SWWS networks in being organized for Southeast Missouri by Wunderlich.He was the principal speaker last night.

Networks have been organized in Poplar Bluff, Dexter, Campbell, Greenville and New Madrid, Another is being organized in Kennett. Others are planned for Bloomfield, Marble Hill, Jacs Jackson, Cape Girardeau, Benton, Charleston, and Caruthersville.

All volunteer weather observers in the community watch program, will be trained in observation and reporting of thunderstorms, tornadoes, funnel sightings, hail and high winds.

The training will be conducted through coordinated efforts of the commander of the individual network and Wunderlich with the use of weather bureau bulletins and pamphlets.

Farmers, service station operators, delivery men or anyone who normally works outside and has access to a two-way radio may be members of the network. City, and county law enforcement officers, civil defense agencies also will assist as volunteer observers.

Each network of the system appoints a commander and sets up an emergency operation center with appointed monitoring stations. The commander will be responsible upon receiving a report of unusual weather conditions from an observer to call the weather bureau in St. Louis reporting the condition sighted. Local radio stations will be among the first persons called by the commander to warn residents of the danger and advise them of safety precautions.

Wunderlich suggested a system of siren warnings should be employed here so residents will be better prepared.

All commanders will assist other towns in setting up a weather watch system and assist in post disaster relief programs.

Wunderlich explained that the systems are being organized throughout the state. Tornadoes usually travel from the southwest to the northeast. About 70 per cent of tornadoes occur in the midwest from March through June.

Tornado weather is hot humid days with southerly winds, and dark heavy clouds normally moving in from the southwest. Funnel-shaped clouds exending down to the earth from the base of a thundercloud indicates the forming of a tornado. If one is observed, call the local radio stations, Wunderlich said.

Don Allen, Sikeston, president of the Bootheel CB Club, or Dick Mays, Sikeston, may be contacted by anyone interested in joining the network for the Sikeston area.

Cong Battalion Uses Human Shields to Break U.S. Cordon

SAIGON (AP) — A veteran Viet Cong battalion, herding women and children in front as human shields smashed into a company of American paratroopers in three waves early today. Thirty-one Americans were killed and 27 wounded.

The waves of troops from the Viet Cong's Cu Chi Regiment broke through a company from the U.S. 101st Airborne Division 26 miles northwest of Saigon. The Viet Cong and the paratroopers were still locked in battle as night fell.

Thirty-one Viet Cong have been reported killed so far.

AP photographer Max Nash reported from the battlefield that many of the Americans were killed by the Viet Cong as they lay wounded on the field.

The battle was one of three fought northwest and southwest of Saigon today in which, according to incomplete reports, at least 110 of the enemy were killed and 150 persons seized as suspected Viet Cong.

A Communist defector had told U.S. intelligence officers that Viet Cong troops were meeting Thursday in the village of Ap Trang Dau, nine miles from a major allied military base housing the headquarters of the U.S. 25th Infantry Division and a South Vietnamese training base for rangers.

Troops from the 25th Division put a cordon around the village, and the Viet Cong tried unsuccessfully three times to break out.

Suddenly, Nash reported, about 300 enemy troops charged through rice paddies into one American paratroop company 150 yards away. The came in three waves. At command headquarters in Cu Chi, the voice of a radio operator came through: "They are coming, they are coming." Then the radio went dead.

U.S. officers said the first wave of enemy troops came running shoulder-to-shoulder through the night, screaming, firing assault rifles and pushing women and children in front of them as human shields.

After breaking the cordon, the enemy vanished into the darkness, leaving 31 of their own dead on the battlefield. Nash said some of the third wave enemy troops had bamboo poles with them to carry off some of their dead.

Six Injured in Three Collisions

Seven were injured in three highway accidents Thursday, the state patrol reported.

In a two car collision on the Johnson Island road, south of highway 25 near Kennett, at 4:15 p.m., a 1956 Ford, driven by J.D. Easley, 16, Kennett, failed to stop at an intersection, and was struck in the left side by a 1968 Ford, driven by Joann Wells, 39, Kennett, the patrol said.

Easley received a fractured skull and bruises to his face. The Wells woman received a bruised right knee, and cuts on her neck.

Both were taken to Dunklin County Memorial hospital in Kennett.

Three were injured at 6:10 p.m., on a country road, near Biehle in Perry county.

A 1960 Ford, driven by Fay Rose Kutz, 18, Perryville, and a 1966 Dodge, driven by Melvin Ranaud, 31, Perryville, met headon on a crest of a hill on the gravel road.

Miss Kutz received a broken nose. She was taken to Perry County Memorial hospital, in Perryville.

Ranaud received bruises on his head and chest injuries; and a passenger, Rhonda Sue Ranaud, three, received bruises on her body and face. Both were treated by a Perryville physician.

Emanuel Lee Reeger, 72, Chaffee, driver of a 1963 Buick, was injured at 9:55 a.m., on highway 25, one mile north of Advance.

Reeger was northbound on highway 25, when a 1955 Chevrolet, driven by Arthur D. Dalton, 58, Advance, pulled from a side road into the path of his car.

Reeger received cuts on his right ear, and a bruised left arm and hand. He was taken to Southeast Missouri hospital in Cape Girardeau.

Dalton was given a summons, the patrol said, for failure to yield right-of-way, and for not having an operator's license.

Fall, Bite, Sting, Ball Bat Injure

Four were admitted to the emergency room of the Missouri Delta Community hospital Thursday:

Skunk Attacks Man in Alley

A skunk lurking in the alley behind the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. on Center St., tried to bite a man leaving the office at about 10 p.m. Thursday.

Jim Tolson, Cape Girardeau, an employe of the company working here, reported the incident to police. He said the skunk attacked him, but did not bite. He called police, because he thought the skunk might have rabies.

Grocery Manager Robbed

FLAT RIVER, Mo. (AP)-A man armed with a pistol robbed a Flat River grocery manager of $8,300 today and then locked the victim in the trunk of his car.

Local officers and a Missouri Highway Patrol airplane joined in search for the robber who drove off with another man.

The manager of the Federal IGA store, Donald Straus, had just stepped out of his automobile when he was met by the robber. Straus was carrying the money in a bank sack which he said was for use in the store's operation today.

The robber told Straus:

' I'm nervous, don't make me do what I don't want to do."

He took the sack and locked the manager in the truck of his car. Straus was released by workmen unloading a grocery truck who reported they saw a car with two men speed out of the parking lot.

Nixon to Visit Springfield

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) - Republican presidential nominee Richard M. Nixon will arrive about noon Sept. 19 by air for a campaign rally at Municipal Airport in Springfield.

The announcement was made today by Rep. Durward G. Hall, R-Mo., and by Gene Taylor of Sarcoxie, Republican national committeeman.

The Nixon visit is scheduled to last about an hour and will come after an earlier appearance that day in Salt Lake City. He will leave from here for an afternoon stop in Peoria, Ill., and is scheduled for an evening telecast that night from New York City.

In the announcement Hall commented on Nixon's stop that "I think we can assure him of a real old-fashioned Ozark welcome, not unlike the one he received during the 1960 campaign."

Nixon carried Missouri's 7th Congressional District by 60,000 votes in 1960, his largest plurality for any congressional district in the nation.

Daley to Air His Views

CHICAGO (AP) - Mayor Richard J. Daley will get his chance to show in at least eight cities his view of what happened in demonstrations during the week of the Democratic National Convention.

Another forum was offered Daley by the National Press Club in Washington. However, Allan W. Cromley, president, said Friday the mayor had not replied to an invitation to address the club on either Tuesday or Wednesday.

A statement signed by the mayor and released Thursday by an aide said Daley has accepted the offer of prime time by two broadcasting companies.

A documentary program, prepared by the mayor's office, will be shown on the Metromedia television and radio network, reaching New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Washington and Kansas City.

The Chicago-based WGN Continental Broadcasting Co. also will show the documentary through its outlets in Chicago, Denver and Duluth, Minn. The firm has offered to make the program available to any other station interested in showing it.

WGN announced that five television stations have requested permission to show the film. They are WJXT, Jacksonville, Fla., WSM-TV, Nashville, Tenn., WREX-TV, Rockford, Ill., WBTV, Charlotte, N.C., and WEWS-TV in Cleveland.

A WGN spokesman added that details of the format for the radio time were being worked out by the major's office. The radio presentation will narrate some of the events that will be shown on film during the television documentary.

Time and date of the airing have not been set, the aide said, but will be announced shortly. It was not announced who will narrate the film.

Earlier this week, Daley asked the three major television networks for prime time to present his case to the American people. Daley charged that the networks presented "onesided coverage" of demonstrations and police actions during last week's convention in Chicago.

The Columbia Broadcasting System rejected Daley's request, saying it already had given Daley a chance to present hisview in a 30-minute interview during the convention.

Republican Headquarters to Open Saturday

The Scott County Republican party will open its headquarters at 226 East Center St. Saturday with Vernon Landgraf, Cape Girardeau, candidate for Congress, 10th district, as guest of honor, from 2:30 to 5:30 p.m.

County candidates, Norman Woods, candidate for state representative; Margaret Scott; candidate for prosecuting attorney; Wesley Harris, for sheriff and Bob Jenkins, for public administrator, will be present.

A dinner for Tom Curtis, candidate for United States senate, is planned for Sept. 26.

Lynn A. Colley is headquarters chairman.

Some Say Half U.S. Troops Could Leave Without Losing War

SAIGON (AP) — How soon can the half million American troops in Vietnam begin turning the burden of the war over to the Vietnamese military and start going home?

The prevailing Saigon viewpoint sees this goal realized only years from now unless a settlement is negotiated. The arming of the Vietnamese with more than 200,000 M16 automatic rifles, half of them already delivered, is seen as the initial phase of a long rebuilding process.

And yet because of the peculiar way the Vietnam war is being fought, particularly the general acceptance that military victory in the classical sense is unreachable because of the war's "limits," there is another viewpoint that suggests American boys can start moving out right now without any appreciable military injury.

Just as another quarter of a million American troops brought into Vietnam would not necessarily win the war, many believe the converse applies: A quarter of a million troops pulled out would not necessarily lose it.

Civilian and military viewpoints on the prospects do not necessarily coincide, but the view that American force levels could and should be reduced has already been placed in circulation in the top government levels in Washington, according to senior Americans here. Its proponents see the war's costs — about $30 billion this year—as the major irritant within the United States over Vietnam.

Some Americans here believe that a phased reduction of U.S. troops could begin immediately, paring the number to 200,000 by 1972. One of the proponents is John P. Vann, an influential and knowledgeable regional director of the U.S.-backed pacification program.

Vann would cut deeply into the elaborate military structure built by the former commander of U.S. troops and now chief of staff of the Army, Gen. William C. Westmoreland.

The U.S. high command jealously guards its establishment in Vietnam. Vann admits his proposal is provocative—"It would need a hard-headed secretary of defense to push it through."

Senior U.S. field commanders are against pulling out any American troops in the foreseeable future. Lt. Gen. Richard G. Stilwell, commander of the area that includes the battle-scarred demilitarized zone, comments: "No troop commander will ever admit he has too many trigger pullers." Certainly it is a tenet among commanders that they need as much manpower as is necessary to accomplish the missions assigned them.

The commanders argue that under the ceiling of 550,000 U.S. troops for Vietnam imposed on the military, an "economy of forces" strategy is already being practiced in most of the country. This is the minimum deployment of forces in one area to permit the maximum deployment in another.

Only around Saigon itself and in the two northernmost provinces are there enough forces to amply meet maximum enemy pressure. Elsewhere the allies react to enemy thrusts by rapidly massing the limited forces available.

American efforts in Vietnam presumably are based on the assumption that Vietnamese will eventually take over the defense burden, but critics see the opposite taking place in some areas. Around Saigon, for example, the continuous threat of a major enemy attack has tempted the U.S. command to insist upon a greater voice in security than is normally the case.

"We could nursemaid the Vietnamese army forever," one civilian official commented.

Several factors are seen as possibly speeding up the time for a partial American withdrawal.

One is improved weaponry in the Vietnamese army. All 158 maneuver battalions in the regular forces have received the M16 automatic rifle with chrome-plated chambers and strengthened recoil buffers to prevent jamming. Local militia forces have started getting the M16, giving them equal if not better firepower than the Viet Cong for the first time since 1964.

The U.S. commander in Vietnam, Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, is "showing considerably less patience for high-level excuses than did Westy," according to one official close to him. Abrams believes that real progress in Vietnam can be made only by the Vietnamese, and has told them so. Vietnamese "officers know that the honeymoon with the U.S. is over —they must fish or cut bait," said one official.

To avert what might turn out to be a complete rejection of the war by the U.S. public, Vann said, a planned reduction of U.S. forces would be a necessity. "We have to show them that this thing can end," he said.

He would go about the reduction by partly dismantling the elaborate military structure erected by Gen. Westmoreland.

"The first 100,000 Americans to leave would be for free," Vann declared. "They are the clerks, the laundrymen, the engineer battalions building officers' clubs throughout the country. So many extraneous things are soaking up people not essential."

In Vann's view, infantry divisions should be limited to one base camp each instead of several (the 1st Division has five base camps.) Each base camp generally requires one battalion of infantrymen to secure, meaning that as much as one third of the trigger-pullers in each of the 11 American infantry divisions are standing guard duty.

Restricted to one base camp, U.S. troops would be required to stay out in the field longer, and walk more, particularly if fewer helicopters were used, another Vann recommendation to save the taxpayers money.

In the 3rd Corps area there are 900 helicopters, each using 3,600 pounds of fuel per day. Others who agree with Vann's viewpoint believe that vast quantities of ammunition are used unnecessarily, particularly in the "searching by fire" tactic wherein a unit moves into an area spraying gunfire in front of it. There are also critics of the constant B52 raids that rattle cities every night. "Those raids cost half a million dollars apiece," one official commented. "I know of at least half a dozen raids where an infantry squad would have been better advised to check out the area— at one thousandth of the cost."

Critics of the cost of the war divide annual expenditures this way: $800,000 U.S. economic aid; $1.8 billion military aid to the Vietnamese army, $2.6 billion in direct support of Vietnamese operations such as naval blockades and air support. The U.S. effort costs an additional $25 billion.

"Our real costs," said one high-level critic "are the 11 U.S. divisions and telling them that the sky is the limit moneywise. If some brigade commander decides to plow the country, we will ship out the equipment. Defoliate the highlands, we'll send the chemicals over. What commander has not told you he would rather spend a million dollars on bombs to stop an enemy force rather than risk one American life? I hate to say it but in Vietnam now that money has become as important as that one life."

Those here who see a U.S. planned withdrawal as possible say they have no intention of selling out the Vietnamese. "I think that taking over the burden of the war is within their capability," Vann said. "Things are looking up, not enough but some. But as we phased out our troops, at some time we might have to make a value judgment, particularly if the other side was benefiting from our withdrawal."

Some Vietnamese units have already taken over from Americans.

The four-craft swiftboat unit at Phuoc Quoc Island is now all Vietnamese. The Vietnamese navy has taken over responsibility for manning eight coastal patrol stations.

Vietnamese minesweepers clear the important Dong Nga River each day. The Vietnamese air force now has a squadron of UH1B (Huey) helicopters, and a squadron of Vietnamese F5 Freedom Fighter jets has flown 5,000 combat missions in the past year.

Vietnamese also are taking over an increasing number of Special Forces camps in the highlands, and the Vietnamese army is moving into some places, such as the Bong Son Plain, that American divisions once policed.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS:
THE JOHN F. KENNEDY

The John F. Kennedy, a 61,450-train aircraft carrier, will be commissioned at Newport News, Va., on Saturday (Sept. 7).

Think of a ship as long as the Empire State Building is tall. Think of a flight deck that would have room enough for 68 tennis courts or four football fields.

Think of a floating city. A ship that houses a chapel, a bakery, complete dental and medical facilities, electrical generating stations, saltwater evaporators to convert brine into portable water for drinking and for the ship's four steam catapults, a laundry, a well-stocked library, TV lounges, radio and television broadcast studios, a motion picture theatre, a post office, and three ladies's powder rooms.

The latest in luxury liners, Hardly: the description fits the John F. Kennedy, the huge aircraft carrier which is being commissioned at a pier at the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company in Virginia on Saturday.

CVA-67, as the ship was designated on the drawing boards, may be the last of the big carriers to have conventional power. In his press conference of Oct. 31, 1963, President Kennedy said: "As you suggest, there is no use having a nuclear carrier unless we have the ships to accompany it -- and after all, there is a large train with a carrier -- unless they have nuclear power ... If you add up the other ships that might have to accompany it, it gets into a large sum."

The argument to the contrary is equally impressive. Capt. Raymond E. Peet, commanding the nuclear frigate Bainbridge, wrote several years ago: "In port our ships are vulnerable; electronic equipments are difficult to maintain in a ready conditioned. Nuclear-powered ships can ramain at sea for indefinite periods and truly fulfill the Navy's claim of a mobile, long-enduring, and versatile defense unit away from home."

The John F. Kennedy will be the largest carrier of the Forrestal class. It is the second ship to be named for a member of the Kennedy family. The other Kennedy vessel is the destroyer Joseph P. Kennedy, named for the late President's brother, who was killed in 1944 during a World War II air mission.

Jack Kennedy once wrote in a foreword to a book on the U.S.S. Constitution' "My earliest memories of the United States Navy go back to the days when, as a small boy, I used to be taken to the U.S.S. Constitution in Charlestown, Mass. The sight of that historic frigate, with its tall spars and black guns, stirred my imagination and made history come alive for me."

John F. Kennedy as a naval officer and as commander-in-chief, understood the sea. He knew well its importance and the importance of ships in the maintenance of a strong defense posture. He told a group of officers and men on June 6, 1963: "Just as Admiral Mahan said more than 50 years ago, any country which wishes to protect its security and the security of those allied with it must maintain its position on the sea. And if there is any lesson of the 20th century, and especially of the past few years, it is that in spite of the advances in space and in the air, strategic air, this country must still move easily and safely across the seas of the world."

"The sea is a friend and an enemy," Jack Kennedy once said. It is appropriate that 10-year-old Caroline Kennedy, the sponsor, on May 27, 1967 smashed a bottle of champagne across the bow of the John F. Kennedy to christen the ship.

THROTTLEBOTTOM NO MORE

In normal circumstances, nominations will be made for the Republican candidacy for Vice President on Thursday (Aug. 8).

ALEXANDER THROTTLEBOTTOM, in the musical Of Three I Sing, had been nominated by the simple process of putting a number of names on slips in a hat and pulling one out. Throttlebottom didn't win; he lost -- that is, is had his name drawn.

The first Vice President, John Adams, called his job "the most insignificant office that ever the invention of man contrived." Some Vice Presidents of the 19th century, nominated for geography rather than talent, were so obscure that their names are remembered today only by cross-word puzzle nuts.

The vice presidential nominee usually "balances" the ticket geographically. Thus Warren of California ran with Dewey of New York in 1948, Bricker of Ohio with Dewey in 1944, Nixon of California with Eisenhower -- adopted by the Eastern Establishment -- in 1952 and 1956, John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson in 1960.

OFTEN THE VICE PRESIDENTIAL NOMINATION goes as reward for help toward the presidential nomination -- Garner with F. D. Roosevelt in 1932. But often it represents an attempt to heal a breach or to reconcile antagonistic elements -- Bricker, a Taft leader, with Dewey in 1944; Robinson, Southern Dry, with Smith, Tammany West, in 1928.

In recent years the nominee for President has expressed his choice for the V.P. candidacy and the convention has approved. Gen. Eisenhower and a group of his close advisers in 1952, for example, agreed on Sen. Richard M. Nixon (Calif.) for the No. 2 spot on the ticket and the convention quickly confirmed their choice. Similarly, the 1960 conventions quickly accepted the designations by the respective nominees of Lyndon B. Johnson and Henry Cabot Lodge for the vice presidency.

But as recently as 1956 the Democrats fought over the Veep nomination after the presidential nominee, Adlai E. Stevenson, declared a hands-off policy in the contest for his running mate. Sen. Estes Kefauver (Tenn.) was nominated on the second ballot after a close race with Sen. John F. Kennecy (Mass.).

THE MODERN RESURRECTION of the vice presidential office from obsecurity, if not impotence, had faint beginnings in Woodrow Wilson's second term. While the President was at the Paris Peace Conference, he authorized Vice President Thomas R. Marshall to preside over Cabinet meetings.

Calvin Coolidge said he had been immeasurably helped in the Presidency by having sat in on some sessions of President Hardin's Cabinet. However, Hoover's advisers in 1928 dropped the Coolidge co-pilot, Vice President Charles G. Dawes. Loius Clinton Hatch has observed: "President Coolidge is said never to have forgiven him (Dawes) for his absence from the Senate when his casting vote might have saved the nomination of Charles B. Warren as Attorney General from defeat."

President Eisenhower on March 8, 1957, told the press that Vice President Nixon was "one of the comers in the Republican party ... young, vigorous, healthy and certainly deeply informed." Yet on Aug. 24, 1960, asked what Nixon had contributed to decision-making, Ike said: "If you give me a week, I might think of one."

Martin Van Buren was the last Vice President (so far) to become President except through the death of the Chief Executive. But eight times the Vice President has become President. Today the nomination for Vice President of either party would scarcely be considered beneath any worthy man. Throttlebottom, who mournfully wanted to go to his "slick" home town, Topeka, is only a memory.

The sock of the Kremlin bloc countries' invasion of Czechoslovakia isn't what it was 20 years ago. It does reveal that the essential nature of Communism as an unyielding, unreasonable, bloody, dishonest, dictatorial, rigid and inflexible force is essentially unchanged.

It was a cat and a mouse game that the Russians played on Czechoslovakia, culminating with the unexpected and brutal invasion of the unhappy country.

It is obvious that Russian Communism permits no slight deviation from the party line and that even the smallest freedoms will not be tolerated.

Russia cannot be trusted by friend or foe alike. No one was more surprised by the invasion than the leaders of Czechoslovakia, who had just gone through the window dressing routine of receiving leaders of Soviet bloc countries in a series of state visits.

The negotiations were merely a deceptive implication that Russia would be content to work out an accomodation over the table instead of at gunpoint.

Those who believed that Czechoslovakia's immediate troubles were over after the visits didn't reckon with the desperation and insecurity of the Kremlin rulers.

Even though a small breath of freedom has been savagely cut in Czechoslovakia, the United States must continue to try to work wherever possible with Russia to keep the peace of the world.

The threat of nuclear war makes this essential.

President Lyndon B. Johnson's offer to go to Russia after the invasion are ill advised and poorly timed.

This is a time when Russia's hand should not be strengthened voluntarily by the United States.

A presidential visit to Russia now would be playing a propaganda game directly into the hands of the Soviet Union.

The message that all countries under Russian domination including Czechoslovakia, would get from the visit would be that as far as the United States is concerned all is forgiven.

All isn't forgiven but there is little that the United States can do to help the liberty loving Czechs now except to give them vocal support and avoid fraternizing or knuckling down to the Russians.

She had just finished her shower when the doorbell rang. Tiptoeing to the front door, shivering in plump, pink nudity, she called, "Who is it?"

"The blind man," came a mournful voice, so she shrugged and opened the door with one hand while reaching for her purse with the other. When she turned to face the man, he was grinning from ear to ear, and she saw that he was holding a large package in his arms.

"You can see!" she exclaimed.

"Yeah," he nodded happily. "And mighty pretty, too. Now, where do you want I should put these blinds?"

The doctor's mouth dropped open. "Your what!?" he gasped.

"My sex drive," said the old man. "It's too high, and I'd like to have you lower it if you can."

"Lower it?!" exclaimed the doctor, still unable to believe what the 90-year-old gentleman was saying, "Just what do you consider 'high'?"

"These days it seems like it's all in my head, Doc," said the old man, "and I'd like to have you lower it if you can."

THOSE TASTY LEFT-OVERS

THE YOUNG PASTOR was over-joyed with a new calling and wanted to make sure that he made the proper impression with his first sermon before the new congregation.

Everything was in its proper place as he stepped into the pulpit. "It says in the Good Book that Jesus fed the Multitued with 5,000 loaves of bread and 2,000 fish. Is there one among you who could do likewise?"

An elderly deacon, sitting in the front row, nodded his head up and down. After the service the pastor asked the deacon how he could do such a thing. The deacon pointed out the pastor's error in the famous numbers which ruined the young man's impression of his day's efforts.

Vowing to make amends, the pastor used the same line a week later only using the correct figures. Still the same front row deacon nodded his head. "How do you think you could have fed the multitude with such little food supply," the minister asked after the service. "I'd use all that was lef over from last week's feed!"

A MATTER OF VIEWPOINT

Former Alabama governor George Wallace is beginning to worry Democrats and Republicans alike the way he is winning friends and influencing voters with his no-nonsense promise to chastize the dissidents and restore respect for law and order in America.

Wallace, it will be remembered, was the man who once literally "stood in the schoolhouse door" to defy the law of the land on the amtter of integration and whose campaign speeches carry the implication that the order of the courts on the same issue will be ignored should he become president.

Law and order. Like beauty, its meaning is in the beholder whose eye is getting poked.

H.L. Hunt Says

CZECHOSLOVAKIA AND DISARMAMENT

Even as the tanks of the Soviet army rumbled through the streets of Prague, some voices were being raised in the United States to say that what was happening in Czechoslovakia proved all over again the imperative need for the United States to enter into a disarmament pact with Russia. "We do have to talk to the Russians about arms control," proclaimed a writer for one of the largest dailies in the U.s.

The question must arise instantly as to the value of talks about arms control with an avowed enemy which has shown repeatedly that treaties with it are worthless. The advocates of disarmament ask us to believe that Soviet Russia can betray an ally and yet be faithful to us. The communists want a free hand to act with the utmost brutality in Czechoslovakia and other satellite nations at the same time that they seek respect and confidence in the rest of the world.

This is utterly unrealistic. The leaders of world communism are not reasonable, peace-loving men. They started the cold war between Russia and the United States even before the shooting of the hot war stopped in 1945. They sent spies into our country to seek out our military and industrial secrets. They arranged to have our ship, "Pueblo" seized on the high seas and its highly classified electronic equipment transported directly into the Soviet Union. They have carried out a continuing campaign of subversion among any Americans they considered susceptible.

In the face of such facts, it is unbelievable that any American can say the Czechoslovakia tragedy proves the need for disarmament talks between Russia and the U.S. Unbelievable -- but it is being said, just the same. HLH.

Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP) — Sidewalk comments of a Pavement Plato:

Are we flooding our schools with the wrong people?

We are sending our kids there. Might it not be better if the grownups went?

This month some 57 million young people will inundate U.S. kindergartens, classrooms and campuses. Many of them profess a reiuctance, since it is "the thing" to do.

"Gee, vacation is so much fun I hate to think of going back to school," said my daughter, Tracy, who is 15 and is secretly rather proud that she'll be a high school sophomore.

"I wish I could go in your place," I told her.

"You must be kidding," she said, unbelieving.

But I wasn't kidding at all. Millions of middle-aged Americans, I am sure, have a wishful yearning to return for a refresher course in the groves of academe.

George Bernard Shaw once said it was too bad youth had to be wasted on the young. The same thing might be said about education.

"Civilization is a race between education and catastrophe," once observed H. G. Wells. This remark is often ridiculed now by our precocious youth as just another pompous platitude from one of yesterday's fuddy-duddies.

But many grown ups have a feeling of desperation that their own education is hardly sufficient to avert the catastrophe.

The sheepskin they won years ago, if they did win one, has hardly proved a passport to safety. They have merely, at the best, staved off catastrophe. Once they, too, were "the hope of tomorrow," but today a younger generation bitterly blames them for the pickle the world finds itself in.

They survived a terrible business depression, two great world wars and innumerable smaller conflicts. Yet civilization, dwelling uneasily under the Damocletian sword of atomic extermination, seems in greater danger than ever.

The average middle-aged man doesn't feel educated. He feels woefully ignorant. He hasn't had much time to campaign for a better world. He has been too busy earning a living, keeping his kids out of jail, and paying off mortgages.

Now, with many of the best years of his life behind him, he suddenly finds himself something of a stranger in the world he lives in. Knowledge has passed him by. Incessant change has riddled many of his firmest beliefs, raised doubts even as to the verity of his God.

"I'm darned if I really know what I am sure about," said one such man. "Everything I learned in school seems to be out-of-date or wrong. I'd give anything to go back to school and start getting educated all over again."

Certainly, if given the chance, most middle-aged men wouldn't waste the opportunity. Perhaps it would be a good idea if every high school graduate, before going on to college, were forced to spend a year in the School of Hard Knocks, and his father given a sabbatical 12-month in a university discovering what the New Knowledge is all about.

It would be a real education experience for both son and dad, and at the end of it there would be less nonsense about "the generation gap" that yawns between them. Each would be wiser and understand the other better.

Isn't it worth a trial? There would be no lack of middle-aged volunteers.

Washington - Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON SAY: TV spotlighting of Chicago violence was deliberate; Networks resented expense of Miami-Chicago move; Provocation of police by militants was ignored

WASHINGTON--This is a column which will make a lot of TV executives sore. It may also make some viewers skeptical about the TV coverage of the recent Chicago convention.

We attended both political conventions and witnessed violence in both Miami and Chicago. Outside agitators came to both cities to foment trouble that they hoped would attract the spotlight and tarnish the U.S. image.

Anyone who watched the two conventions on television might think that chicago was exploding with violence while Miami was comparatively peaceful.

Yet in Miami, six persons were killed, and the riot area was put under curfew. In Chicago, sniper fire was reported, but only one policemen was wounded. A bullet also thudded into a bus. The outbreaks never became serious enough to require a curfew.

After the Miami convention we reported that the TV networks, angry over the $3 million it was costing them to pull up their cables and transfer everything to Chicago, intended to retaliate by focusing attention on Democratic "disturbances."

The networks got their revenge, in Chicago they played up the violence which they had virtually ignored in Miami. They complained about tight security restrictions, which, incidentally, had also been imposed by the Republican convention. They sought out the dissidents and featured them while the Democratic orators were expounding.

TELEVISION'S JOB

This raises two important questions about the role of TV at the Democratic convention.

1. Did the TV cameras help incite the violence? There is little doubt that the provocations were planned largely for the benefit of television. We stayed at the Conrad Hilton Hotel, which was the center of most of the trouble. During the disturbances we mingled with the hippies and yippies. We found almost no action outside the circle of the TV Kleig lights. Aside from some shouting and surging, little was happening in the darkness.

2. Did the TV networks make news? There is evidence that the TV networks, perhaps in their eagerness to generate high ratings for TV sponsors, encouraged dissidents to make inflammatory statements and helped to stir up controversies. When the networks sell convention time to cigarette and oil sponsors for several million dollars, they have to keep up the viewing interest. One way of doing this is to pick fights, stimulate excitement, interrupt dull speeches and roll calls. Once, the sound was switched on before the cameras focused on a TV newsman about to interview a prominent Democrat. The interviewer was overheard coaching his subject: "Let's keep this Kennedy story going."

The TV networks also presented an outrageously biased picture of the events in Chicago. They gave the impression, for instance, that the police were beating up innocent young people who had come to Chicago for peaceful demonstrations.

Certainly, the police were too zealous in swinging their billy clubs, and a lot of innocent people were hurt.

HIPPIE HECKLERS

But the TV networks scarcely mentioned the provocations that finally made the police lose their tempers. The hippies shouted obscenities, hurled rocks and bottles, sprayed police with caustic chemicals, damaged police cars and generally defied police orders.

One group tore down the American flag and tried to raise a communist flag in its place. Other agitators waved red flags and North Vietnamese flags. A couple of demonstrators slammed a huge chunk of cement through the window of a police car. Others stoned police cars, tossed cherry bombs and stink bombs, smashed windows, broke into liquor stores.

Jerry Rubin, the yippie leader, cried through a bullhorn for violence against the police, whom he called "pigs." Black panther leaders, taking the stump in Lincoln Park, urged the demonstrators to break up into small groups and go on a rampage through Chicago's loop. Other agitators made speeches that sounded like radio Hanoi and radio Peking.

The same night that police began cracking heads, 70 policemen were also injured. Several officers had to be hospitalized. By the end of the convention week, 118 officers had been hurt.

This was a side of the story that the TV networks largely ignored. They had hundreds of newsmen and cameramen in Chicago who should have been able to get the facts. The two of us, operating alone, easily dug out the full story.

Indeed, we reported in advance what was in store for the Democrats in Chicago. We had studied government intelligence reports which warned that the militants planned a deliberate provocation of the police on the two most important nights of the convention.

We reported that the leaders ranged from communists and anarchists to sincere pacifists. They were directed loosely by the national mobilization committee to end the war in Vietnam. The co-chairmen are Dr. Sidney Morris Peck, a former communist, and David Dellinger, a pacifist who has been to Hanoi and is an apologist for Ho Chi Minh.

We reported on August 25: "The committee has trained a group of militant demonstrators to attempt a 'crash-in' to break into the convention amphitheater. They will be directed by marshals carrying walkie-talkies. Calls have gone out for medics to give first aid to the demonstrators and electronic experts to operate the radio equipment.

This was published three days before the first violence. It all happened exactly on schedule. And the TV networks showed it all exactly as they had threatened.

Inside Labor

GIANTS BATTLE:
Reuther Launches New Civil War Inside Labor

Washington, D. C,: -- Walter Reuther, having served his time in Chicago like the rest of us, celebrated his 61st birthday last Sunday by proving that he still was sufficiently young in heart to take a whack at the politics of confrontation.

It was easy. The rusty-haired maverick simply declared war on other labor giants. The struggle could be bloodier than the battles of Lincoln Park. Reuther simply crossed labor's Rubicon by tearing up his nonagression pact with the million-member International Assn. of Machinists (IAM), one of George Meany's favorite unions.

So strongly fraternal towards the IAM is AFL-CIO president Meany, that he hedge-hopped for it it as he never has for any other organization.

Last week Meany waited in Chicago just long enough to get Hubert Humphrey's telephone call early Thursday, Aug. 29, during which the Vice President confided to the cigar-chewing number one union chief that Sen. Ed Muskie would be the vice presidential candidate.

Meany was delighted. He then took a train east. Monday morning, the labor prexy marched with Mr. Humphrey, sat alongside him in the reviewing stand for several hours, and then raced for a plane back to Chicago.

There he spoke at the massive Machinist convention in the Conrad Hilton. For those who know of Meany's distaste for travel, this was a great demonstration of solidarity with Machinists' president Roy Siemiller -- now Walter Reuther's prime target.

On this labor beat you can insult a man tohis face and walk away unbloodied. But you don't raid his territory unless you want open war.

Well, Reuther has begun invading the Machinists' territory. The auto union has joined with the Teamsters in a raid on the Machinists' jurisdiction over the McDonnell Douglas aircraft plant in St. Louis. There are more than 21,000 members at stake. For years the Machinists have had them under contract at the Phantom jet plant there. Now Reuther seeks to dump the Machinists union from this, one of IAM's biggest, most famous installations.

This is civil war. It will spill over into the West Coast aerospace industry where both unions have major contracts. There will be counter raids by the Machinists and their allies.

And Reuther knows these are not flabby allies. Not the least of them is that one-man "stonewall" Paul Hall, the Seafarers' International Union chief. Hall can whip up a storm, orate like an old-style medicine man, argue like a college-bred transportation economist, and swear like an infuriated cleaver-wielding gallery cook. He's used all these techniques on President Johnson, several White House aides, scores of congressmen - and especially on Walter Reuther and Jimmy Hoffa.

Though it has gone unnoticed during the current political heat, it was Paul Hall who pulled the Chicago taxi strike right smack during the Democrats' national convention, though he's one of Mr. Humphrey's most active supporters and heaviest contributors.

That was the strategic moment for Hall's Chicago taxi union to strike. So it did. Paul Hall plays it hard. He's had to. He's been theprime target of the communist underground and the mob's underworld. He fought Hoffa all the way from Puerto Rico to California, and beat him.

Now Hall has replaced Walter Reuther (who was suspended from the AFL-CIO last spring) as chairman of the big federation's national Organizing Committee.

Hall tells me he plans to revamp the Organizing Committee.

"I want to give it a shot in the arm," says Hall," by remodeling it on the style of the Committee On Political Education (COPE.) This means that we must involve in our new drives everybody in the federation. And all the unions too. And their officers, just the same as we go down to the firing-line on politics. Reuther made this committee one of the AFL-CIO's most dormant bodies. Since 1965, he turned in only one report. But now we'll getit moving."

Hall always says what he means. He's one of the strong men in Meany's inner circle. It may take a few months, but the counter drive will start. It may take the form of raids on Reuther's territory. It may be a campaign into new fields. Whatever the strategy, the tactic will be to hem in Reuther, the auto workers, and the Teamsters if necessary.

This makes it the battle of the giants. Insiders know that it can get bloody as organizing squads move against each other.

We'll know better during the week of Sept. 16 where all this feuding is heading. On that Monday the AFL-CIO high command gathers in New York City for its late summer session.

The decision must be made whether to hold off or to haul-off at Reuther during the presidential campaign.

Obviously Reuther has moved on the theory that the AFL-CIO is so heavily committed to Hubert Humphrey's drive that the federation will not be able to spare time, money or energy while he swoops in. He may be right. But the campaign is over on the night of Nov. 5.

After that it will be a long hot winter on the labor front.

Couple Wed Friday in Dillon Home

MOREHOUSE - Miss Carmela Jeanne McIntyre, became the bride of Ronald Oliver last Friday at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William S. Dillion.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Montell Pascal, before an improvised altar setting of candelabra and baskets of white glads and mums. The bride was escorted to the altar by her grandfather. She wore a wedding dress of white silk brocade designed on slim A lines. It was covered by a matching coat fashioned with a Neru collar and was buttoned to the waist with tiny white silk buttons and flared into a full skirt. She wore a short veil secured by a headpiece of white flower petals. Her bouquet of yellow cymbidium orchids was attached to a white Bible.

Cathi McIntyre, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and was attired in a dress of yellow wool crepe, A line styled with a high waist. She wore a crosage of white carnations.

Diane Dillon, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William B. Dillion of Sikeston, was flower girl, wearing a dress of yellow organdy, fashioned with a tight waist and a full gathered skirt circled with a matching sash tied into a large bow in the back. The skirt was encircled with a band of embroidered pink and yellow flowers. She carried a basket of white fuji mums.

Oliver chose as his best man Donald Holmes of Memphis.

A reception followed. The refreshment table was covered with a yellow satin cloth and overlaid with yellow net, caught up in swags at the center and either side with yellow taffeta bows centered with sprigs of lily of the valley. An arrangement of white daisies and yellow mums in a silver bowl centered the table flanked on either side by silver candelabra holding white tapers. A wedding cake topped by a miniature bride and groom appointed one end of the table and a silver coffee service the other. Punch was served from a crystal bowl on a small table covered with a floor-length cloth of yellow satin. Jayne Shoptaw and Ann Hammock, cousins of the bride, and Mrs. Rita Bates and Mrs. Douglas Hammock, Aunts, assisted at the reception.

After a wedding trip, the couple will make their home in Memphis.

The Gospel Visitor

By
REEDUS M. BUAGHER

In this lesson I would like to raise a question, and answer it. What is the gospel? The one Paul said he and others preached. (Gal. 1:8; 1 Cor. 15:1-4; 2 Cor. 4:3; Rom. 1:16) There could be other Scriptures used showing that it is a definite article. And surely can be explained in definite terms, since God will take vengeance on them who refuse to obey it. (2 Thessalonians 1:8).

The word "gospel" used in the inspired writings, is composed of two words. One meaning good or glad, and the other meaning news or tidings. So simply it means good news or glad tidings. Thus, it is true that the gospel means "good news." But it is equally true that all good news is not the gospel. Since the gospel is relative to man's salvation, in order for the good news to be the gospel or part of it, it must in some way be related to salvation. There is a great deal of good news which is not the gospel spoken of in the Scriptures. Paul says, in Romans 1:16, that the gospel is God's power to save. Not implying that it limits God's power to the gospel, but informing all to the fact that God's power to save, is embodied, in the gospel.

In the fifteenth chapter of first Corinthians, Paul, after saying he had preached the gospel to them in that city, preceeds to state in a summary way what he had preached, saying, "Christ died, was buried, and arose the third day according to the Scriptures." Here are cetain great facts concerning Christ, His death, burial, and resurrection. Yet these facts, important as they are, do not constitute the full and complete gospel. It was not his purpose to make a statement of the entire gospel in this place. He mentions fundamental facts, but there is more in this gospel than its wonderful facts. For we read of the obedience of the gospel, and facts cannot be obeyed. In order to obedience there must be commands. But facts and commands are not all, for we read of the hope of the gospel, and hope rests upon promises. If there is no promise there is no ground for hope. The gospel must, therefore, contain promises. These, then, are the essential parts of the gospel of Christ, facts, commands, promises. (Rom. S:24,25; 16:26; 2 Pet. 1:4

The order in which I have named them is their logical, Scriptural order. And our relation to each of these is different. Facts are to be believed, commands are to be obeyed, promises are to be enjoyed. The order of the process in us also corresponds to the order of the parts of the gospel. First faith in the facts, then obedience to the commands, next rejoicing in the promises. Much of the confusion which manifestly exists concerning this matter, is to be attributed either to the fact that this order is not observed, or that a part only is presented for the whole. Were I to undertake to produce joy without first producing faith and obedience, that upon which the joy legitimately rests, I would produce confusion. Or were I to preach of the exceeding great and precious promises, without showing how enquires are to appropriate these, I need not be surprised to find that I have bewildered those whom I should have guided along a plain way. How simple was the gospel as preached at first, and how easily understood! Next week we will consider the facts, commands, and promises of the gospel.

Indians Open September 21

CAPE GIRARDEAU--The highlight of the first full week of fall football practice at Southeast Missouri State College will come Friday (Sept. 6) with a limited scrimmage game, Head Coach Tom Thrower said today.

Thrower, starting his first season as the Indians' chief, said the game will be the first of two scrimmage contests before Cape State opens its schedule Sept. 21 at Delta State College in Cleveland, Mississippi.

Forty-six returnees and 30 freshmen reported for practice last week and ran through three days of light conditioning and running exercises. It was Labor Day before they dressed out in pads and really got down to the business of football.

After their first contact work on Monday, the athletes scrimmaged Tuesday night and more of the same was on tap.

The head coach plans twice daily workouts through next Tuesday (Sept. 10) and he is already singing the blues as he prepares the Indians to defend their Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association conference title.

Twelve seniors are gone from that championship squad, and a starting offensive guard, Terry Coff, did not return this fall.

Two other top prospects are also out for the season due to knee injuries. They are Doug Mackey, who had been counted on for considerable duty at a linebacking spot, and Roger Roethe, a leading contender at tackle.

Several other players are also on the doubtful list at the moment because of various ailments.

Still, there are 10 starters, including six all-conference selections, among the 22 lettermen back from last fall.

The five first stringers on offense who are on hand again this season are Roger Combs, John Diepenbrock, Walt Smallwood, Don Giannola, and Bruce Hoffman. Returning defensive regulars are Jim Bland, Van Hitt, Steve Jerabek, Tom Critchlow and Gary Kehrer.

"The spirit and attitude of the boys is good, and we hope to have a good season," Thrower said. "But we're thinner than I've ever seen us at the tackle and linbacking positions, and we'll be in trouble if we get other injuries at Key positions."

Thrower, 30, succeeded Ken Knox as head coach of the Cape State Indians. Knox resigned last spring after 16 seasons and six conference titles to devote full-time to his duties a sathletic director.

The new coach, who played under Knox and later was an assistant on his staff, is being assisted this year by Ryland (Ductch) Meyr on offense and Ken Hargens and Jim Hamby on defense.

Thrower said he does not plan any basic changes in the Indians' style of play.

"We threw a lot last season and we plan to continue to throw the ball," he said.

To be successful at this, Thrower must find a replacement for quarterback Greg Brune, the only missing member of last season's offensive backfield.

Top candidates for the slot are Al Poelker, Greg Schroeder, and Mark Calandro.

Sports Corner

There are two things that the Sikeston baseball program is in great need of! First Sikeston needs an additional baseball field, so that more boys can participate and second, the commissioner form of each league needs to be abolished and a group of interested citizens should be in charge of all leagues and monies.

This past season saw a great need for assistance. The Babe Ruth All-Stars and the Connie Mack baseball teams found themselves in a financial bind. This could possibly have been avoided if all the city leagues monies had been in one fund. League workers had to go out to the merchants and ask for a helping hand.

A new Babe Ruth field would provide for an additional 90 boys to participate in either the 13-15 division or the 16-18 division.

The commissioners have done excellent jobs while running their respective leagues, but with the administration of such a big program as Sikeston has, it puts one person in a bind, where a commission could meet each week and discuss problems or needed repairs at the parks.

Now that New Madrid, Portageville, Lilbourn, Matthews and Parma are all in one school district it sets up a fine situation with the high schools remaining where their are atpresent.

With such a district, the New Madrid county R-1 school district could set up intramural programs in baseball, track, basketball, volleyball and football, establishing a program that would benefit the district, if and when a new school would be built.

Such an program would give more physical fitness opportunities to boys and girls.

It's the ideal situation. Let's see what can be done.

Memphis State Top Pick

KANSAS CITY AP - Providing Coach Billy Murphy succeeds in plishing his passing game, Memphis State is a good bet to succeed in its first shot at the football championship the pass-minded Missouri Valley Conference.

The Valley might be called the home of the bomb. In this league the practice has been to pass first and run only if you have to or as a surprise weapon.

Tulsa and Glenn Dobbs with a long string of gifted throwers and catchers lead the nation in passing yardage for an unprecedented five straight years. Then Texas El-Paso, coached by Glenn's brother, Bobby Dobbs, won the national crown last year. Tulsa was second at 263.9.

Valley champion North Texas was eighth with 223.6, and the Steve Ramsey-to-Ron Shanklin sophomore combination was the nation's best in scoring.

Every team in the Valley gained more yards in the air than on the ground. Memphis State, which rushed for 1,682 and passed for only 795, ruined an unbeaten North Texas record in the final game, 29-20.

"North Texas was a little flat that day," Murphy says. "They will be ready for us this year at Denton, and we catch them right after Mississippi and Tennessee."

The winner of that one still must contend with Tulsa. Dobbs warns, "We'll pass more this year ans we'll do it better - we'll have to."

Tulsa threw 389 passes last year but Dobbs contends "we committed ourselves to the run to often."

Louisville's offense, led by a talented run-pass quarterback, Wally Oyler, and skittery tailback Herbie Phelps, worries the other Valley coaches. But the defense is a question mark.

Homer Rice warns that his second Cincinnati team could be the surprise of the Valley. Wichita State is rebuilding under Eddie Kriwiel.

North Texas won't have the surprise element this year and Coach Rod Rust lost four outstanding men from his "Mean Green" defensive unit. But the 1968 defense could be just as mean, if 6-foot-4, 274-pound Joe Greene can avoid ankle troubles.

Tulsa's defense is potentially the best Dobbs had had. Quarterback Mike Stripling, a good passer and dangerous runner, should have a big year if a summer leg injury doesn't bother him.

Don't look for Memphis State to pass a lot, but Murphy concedes "we will have to throw and catch a lot better than we did this spring."

Little Ricky Thurow hit 46 per cent last year with just one interception. Those figures doubtless would please Murphy, who has a dangerous tailback in Nick Pappas and another tough defense.

Rice started last year by taking off 1,400 pounds of fat from his squad. Now they are regaining lost strength and their new weight is in muscle. An example is tackle Butch Foreman, once 270 pounds, who played at 218 and is now a strong and quick 245.

Cincy's defense should be much improved. The offense is led by tailback Lloyd Pate and passes Greg Cook.

Wichita has a strong defense, but it had to play most of the way last year. Kriwiel promises a balanced offense. He might do it, if his good-looking newcomers give tailback KennyLee enough help.

Bengals Open AFL Season

By The Associated Press

Cincinnati will find out if a couple of preseason surprises mean anything in the first playfor-keeps match, while the prestige of the venerable National Football League is at stake in a couple of games that don't mean anything this weekend.

In a quirk of scheduling, the expansion Bengals open the American League campaign at San Diego tonight before most of the other pro teams wrapup exhibition activity.

The Bengals, rated two touchdown underdogs in the game to be nationally televised by the National Broadcasting Co. at 8:30 p.m., pulled off a couple of upsets in their last two exhibtions—beating Pittsburgh and the New York Jets.

Two other AFL openers also are on tap during the weekend. Boston is at Buffalo Sunday, while two top threats—Kansas City's Western Division runners-up and Houston's defending Eastern titlists—meet at Houston Monday night, both games will be televised nationally by NBC.

In addition, there are 10 exhibitions Friday night and Saturday—including two interleague tests. And, the NFL will have to win both to accomplish a little face saving.

Because of Joe Namath's injured knee, Detroit, NFL, is favored to stop the New York Jets, AFL, in the first game of a doubleheader at Cleveland Saturday night. But a showdown the same evening between the Atlanta Falcons, NLF, at Miami, AFL, is reated a toss-up.

Three NFL exhibitions are scheduled Friday night: Minnesota vs. New Orleans at Shreveport, La., St. Louis at Chicago and San Francisco at Los Angeles.

Green Bay's champions collide with the Browns in the second game of the doubleheader at Cleveland Saturday night, wile New York plays Philadelphia in the afternoon at Princeton, N.J.; Baltimore is at Dallas, and Pittsburgh plays Washington at Norfolk, Va.

Denver meets Oakland at Portland, Ore., in an AFL exhibition Saturday night.

The NFL swings into regular season play Saturday, Sept. 14, with Atlanta at Minnesota.

Foes Renew Effort to Bar Fortas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court pornography decisions and the uncertain impact of the presidential nominations were key factors today as opponents renewed their assault on the nomination of Abe Fortas as chief justice.

Sen. John L. McClellan, setting the stage for today's resumption of Senate Judiciary Committee debate on the nomination, showed three stag party films Tuesday to staff aides of noncommittee senators.

The Arkansas Democrat, presumably trying to drum up support for opposition to Fortas outside the committee, called the films "degrading."

He said they "ought to be shown at a committee hearing and made part of the record."

Fortas, as an associate justice voted with the majority that found two of the films not to be pornography. The vote became a major point in opponents' arguments just before Congress broke Aug. 3 for the political conventions.

Some committee members saw the films then.

McClellan's showing of them Tuesday made it clear that the opposition to President Johnson's appointment of Fortas to succeed Earl Warren has not slackened. Warren has retired contingent upon Senate approval of a successor.

Less obvious as Congress returns to work is the impact on the controversy of Richard M. Nixon's nomination as Republican presidential candidate.

Nixon was one of the earliest to say Johnson should make no nominations until after the election. There have been predictions that his selection as GOP standard bearer will blunt some support of Fortas from Republican senators now more interested in party unity.

Because the opponents have the support of Nixon, some Republican senators are wondering if this will force Sen. Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois to reassess his position.

Dirksen, the Senate GOP leader, strongly supported Johnson's nomination of Fortas when it was submitted. Aides have said lately, however, that Dirksen may be too busy with his own re-election campaign to take an active part in the fight.

Johnson has nominated another old friend and a fellow Texan, U.S. Appeals Judge Homer Thornberry, to succeed Fortas as an associate justice of the Supreme Court if Fortas is confirmed as chief justice.

But the Judiciary Committee has put Thornberry's nomination aside pending Senate action on Fortas' appointment.

Kentucky's Thruston B. Morton is another Republican question mark. He was one of the first to join the opposition, then changed his position and said he'd support Fortas. Now, however, he is working almost fulltime with the Nixon campaign as a top adviser.

Crops Ahead Of Last Year

KANSAS CITY (AP)- Missouri crops generally are making better progress than a year ago, federal and state agricultural experts reported today.

Authorities said about two-thirds of the corn crop is mature enough to be safe from any early frost, compared with only one-third at this time a year ago. Corn harvesting has begun in the southern part of the Missouri Bootheel.

Pods are setting on more than 80 per cent of the soybean crop, and growth was described as good despite a lack of rain, especially in the southeast part of the state.

The grain sorghum crop was described as about half matured and growing about two weeks ahead of last year.

Marginal Students Can Succeed If Given Proper Direction

CANTON--I. C. Little has graduated from high school. His counselors, teachers and parents feel I. C. has the potential to become a college student, but his high school grades show only limited success. Can I. C. get into a good college? If admitted, can this type of student be expected to succeed?

An experiment conducted at Culver-Stockton College has proven that selected marginal students can succeed in college provided that they are given the proper direction.

For the past six years Culver-Stockton has conducted an experimental "Special Service School" for high school students who have the potential for college work, but whose high school achievement has not reflected it. Results of the project have been gratifying.

After careful selection of a maximum of 25 students, based on high school grades, testing programs, recommendations and interviews, the students are enrolled in an eight-week summer session. The session is designed to make the students better prepared for college and to give them a boost that will provide them with a running start for their freshman year--the year when there is the highest number of flunk-outs or drop-outs.

Dr. Ethel Kaump, enthusiastic director of the project since its inception, emphasizes that these students are not rejects or drop-outs. They are students who have the necessary potential, but due to distractions, such as being serviced in a variety of education experiences traveling from school to school, illness or emotional problems, are not ready for school.

'Many have become overloaded in extra-curricular areas which become dominant at the expense of learning skills," says Dr. Kaump. "We give them extensive training in learning skills, without the extra-curricular frills.

The program begins with three weeks of intensive training in which as many distractions as possible are eliminated. Visitors, including parents, are discouraged. Students may not have cars. They study six days a week and join together in planned recreation.

During these three "intensive" weeks, Dr. Kaump and other faculty concentrate strictly on learning skills--reading, listening, writing and investigation. "We ask them to find themselves by testing their ability, and putting themselves through an identifying, searching experience," Dr. Kaump says.

One of the student's early assignments is to write a paper describing who he is and what he is. Most are brutally frank and well aware of their short-comings. Inarticulateness, the inability to communicate, is a common fault and one which Dr. Kaump feels can be greatly helped by this type of program.

Following the three weeks of learning about themselves and developing study skills, the students take courses for college credit and have an opportunity to test their new-found skills. Students can earn up to 8½ hours freshman credit--or they can fail.

The regular college courses are selected to give the student one general education course and one elective course. General psychology has been used as the general education course. "The psychology course is geared to help the students better understand their own behavior as well as that of all human behavior," Dr. Kaump says. Elective courses have included sociology, mathematics and literature. All students take the same elective course.

Most make at least average grades and are then eligible for admittance as regular students at Culver-Stockton, although some choose to attend another college.

And when the fall term arrives, the Special Service School student, who has been successful in completing the eight weeks of concentrated effort, is ready to succeed, armed with new study habits, several hours of credit, and a new confidence.

How successful has the program been? Most of those who complete the summer session enroll for the fall semester. "And about 64 percent of those who enroll in the fall are able to successfully complete their college careers," says Dr. Kaump.

Several students who were admitted to college as part of the Special Service School program later graduated with honors and attended graduate school. One of the early students has begun work on a doctorate degree. Many are teaching.

"This experiment is one example of our college's basic principles and motivations which is to help people achieve their highest potential," says Dr. Fred Helsabeck, Culver-Stockton president.

"The results of the program over six years indicates that it has been quite successful. We have been pleasantly surprised with the number of graduates coming from this group."

Dr. Helsabeck also expressed gratitude to Dr. Kaump, who was recently named Professor of Education and Psychology, Emeritus, and will continue to head the summer program despite her retirement.

'We owe special appreciation to Dr. Kaump for directing the program for six years and for her offer to return and continue to head the program as long as the demand for it continues," Dr. Helsabeck said.

In summing up the success of the program, the president said, "This program indicates that personal motivation, improved self-image, and minimal aid in learning skills are very important factors in effective learning."

Those select students who failed to meet Culver-Stockton's regular requirements, but through the Special Service School may achieve a college education, are proof that the I. C. Littles can succeed with proper guidance.

Weather to Be Warm, Rainfall Normal

By Leonard F. Hand
Agricultural Meteorogist

PORTAGEVILLE - The 30-day weather outlook for September indicates that Southeast Missouri farmers can look for warmer then normal temperatures and near normal rain.

The favored track for high pressure centers crossing the continent will extend across the northern tier of the United States. High pressure over the southeast corner-of the country will continue to feed warm air over the lower Mississippi Valley with sufficient regularity to offset occasional intrusions of cool air from the north. Average temperatures over the month is expected to run above normal for this time of year.

The major track of low pressure centers affecting the mid-south is likely to run from the Great Plains to the Great Lakes region, north of the Bootheel. Most rain is likely to come in showers and thundershowers generated by cold fronts that extend south from the storm centers.

Normal rain for the Bootheel during September is 3.41 inches. Normals for individual cities are: Cape Girardeau 3.73 inches, New Madrid 3.42 inches, Caruthersville 3.03 inches, Parma 3.36 inches, Dexter 3.74 inches. Poplar Bluff 3.45, Doniphan 3.53, Sikeston 3.70 inches and Morehouse 3.43 inches.

Short term averages for other locations are: Advance 2.90 inches, Kennett 2.53 inches, Bernie 2.94 inches, Malden 2.57 inches, Bloomfield 2.90 inches, Portageville, 2.55 inches, Charleston 2.42 inches, Puxico 2.89 inches, Clearwater Dam 2.78 inches, Qulin 2.55 inches, Deering 2.10 inches and Wappapello Dam 2.45 inches.

Long term records indicate the following average rainfall for September with near normal precipitation: Poplar Bluff 3.82 inches, Sikeston 3.92 inches and Caruthersville 3.66 inches. Total monthly rain over that period during Septembers falling in the near normal category ranged from 3.18 to 4.38 inches at Poplar Bluff, from 3.48 to 4.30 at Sikeston and from 3.20 to 4.45 inches at Caruthersville.

The above normal temperature trend is likely to maintain favorable conditions for defoliation beyond the usual period this season. Missouri University Cotton defoliation recommendations indicate that leaf drop is slowed and is less complete when minimum temperatures drop below 60 degrees. Rain within 4 to 6 hours after applications doesn't reduce effectiveness of the chemical, according to the MU Guide.

Dry weather in a number of spots over the Bootheel will reduce the urgency for bottom defoliation since ballrot symptoms are not showing up in absence of high humidity in the lower plant zone. Low soil moisture, sometimes coupled with mite infestations, has already prompted some leaf drop. In sections where rain was more plentiful, or where the crop was irrigated regularly, daily forecasts and five day weather outlooks should be helpful in determining the schedule of defoliants. Where possible, applications should be made at a time when sunny, warm weather will follow, since cloudy, rainy weather causes poor leaf drop.

To maintain the quality of cotton, producers are reminded of the damage that may develop when cotton is picked with long delays before ginning. To play it safe, hold back until dew is off the lint in the morning, and discontinue harvesting when dew forms in the evening. Daily agricultural advisories predict the occurrence and intensity of dew and the time when dew will dry each morning. Keep in mind that dew formations are more likely and will be heavier in those sections where water has been plentiful. When the harvest is well in progress, daily bulletins will be issued from the ESSA Weather Bureau Agricultural Service Office to Bootheel radio stations linked to the ESSA Weather Wire. These bulletins will include condition of cotton that morning, weather conditions affecting drying, and the recommended time during the day when harvesting will hield maximum quality.

The extreme variability in rain during the past month is shown by the following totals reported by ESSA Weather Bureau stations in the Bootheel for August: Caruthersville 0.77 inches, Kennett 1.71 inches, Malden 3.70 inches, Charleston 1.15 inches, Poplar Bluff 7.43 inches, Sikeston 3.07 inches, Portageville 1.46 inches and University of Missouri Experimental Farm 0.82 inches. Unless rain during September provides more even distribution of moisture before harvest starts in earnest, quality harvesting schedules will vary considerably from dry to wet locations.

Above normal temperatures are expected to maintain moisture stresses on late crops until rainfall brings relief to soybeans. Irrigation made a big difference in dry areas this season, and additional applications may pay off on beans if shower distribution is no better than in past weeks.

Corn harvest, now underway, may be slowed by occasional showers, but it would take considerable moisture to make some of our dry fields impassible for any length of time. Where grain is to be dried after harvest, farmers should pick times during the day when relative humidity is below 65% if unheated air is to be used. This will occur by mid forenoon on good drying days, and moisture rises rapidly toward sunset on our cool, fall days.

Travelers Checks Believed to Be Counterfeit

CAIRO-A large quantity of shredded travelers checks found on route 3 in Alexander county apparently are counterfeit, Sheriff Chesley Willis said.

Highway crewmen and sheriff's deputies gathered up enough small pieces to half fill a large cardboard box. The pieces were strewn over an area near the Cache Diversion bridge.

Mixed with the checks were Social Security cards, drivers licenses, birth certificates and other types of forms, all believed to be counterfeit.

The checks were in the amounts of $100 and it was estimated that they would total nearly $25,000 if pieced together.

Sheriff Willis said they managed to reconstruct several of them and noticed that all the serial numbers were identical and closer examination gave other indications of their being worthless.

The hundreds of pieces of shreeded papers evidently were tossed from an auto before they were noticed by the county highway crew working in that vicinity.

Power Line Authorized For Noranda Complex

JEFFERSON CITY-Reauthorization to install a large power line across Current River toserve expanding Bootheel industry has been granted by the Missouri Public SerCommission, it was announced Tuesday.

The state agency, for the second time, has authorized the Sho-Me Power Corp. to install a 161,000-volt power line across Current River in a secotion of the Ozark National Riverway to serve Southeast Missouri lead mines and to provide temporary power for the new Noranda industrial complex at New Madrid.

The USC order permits Sho-Me to move the crossing point about one mile below the Round Spring State Park to a new site about one mile above the park. Permission had been granted last year to cross Current River and build lines through the Ozark Riverway area, an 81,000-acre scenic region, by he state commission. It was later suggested by the U.S. Department of Interior that the crossing site be changed and the case before the state agency was reopened.

Conservation forces fought the proposed power line crossing, while development groups in the Bootheel favored it because of the demand for increased power for industrial purposes in this area. Some opposition groups sought the support of Lt. Gov. Thomas F. Eagleton, who suggested in a letter to the Department of Interior that perhaps another crossing could be found. True Davis, a Senatorial primary opponent of Eagleton, injected the issue in last month's campaign and called for approval of the crossing.

The PSC ruling was 5-1 in favor of the crossing. The lone dissenter was Howard Elliott, Jr., a Republican member of the commission. Voting for the location change were PSC chairman William Clark and commissioners Marvin E. Jones, a former Dexter resident, Charles J. Fain and Wilard Reine.

The PSC order become effective tomorrow. The crossing will be a part of a 115-mile line running from Norfolk dam in Arkansas through Willow Springs to an eastern terminus at the new $33 million Ozark Lead Co. mine in western Reynolds County. The plant itself will be served by the Arkansas-Missouri Power Co.

An official of the Sho-Me Corp. told The Daily Democrat that the line would also be used to supply temporary power for the aluminum processing plant, to be built by the Noranda Corp., south of New Madrid. A $500 million power complex will eventually be built at New Madrid to supply Noranda's needs.

Caltech Entry Named Electric Car Race Victor

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Great Electric Car Race has ended with the California Institute of Technology entry the winner by a wire-thin margin.

The judges in the cross-country race, the editors of Machine Design magazine, met nearly 10 hours Wednesday before awarding first place to Caltech's battery-powered Volkswagen Microbus.

Clare Wise, one of the judges, said Caltech's car with a correct elapsed time of 210.3 hours was 30 minutes ahead of the converted Chevrolet Convair driven by students from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Both cars will be exhibited at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington The MIT car was flown there by the Air Force.

The race began at noon, Aug. 26. Both cars traveled the same 3,300-mile route, but in opposite directions.

The Caltech car arrived at the MIT campus in Cambridge, Mass., at 7:46 a.m. Wednesday. MIT's entry arrived at the Pasadena, Calif., campus of Caltech at 6:27 p.m. Monday.

Penalties were assessed for such things as towing. Wise said the MIT car was towed several times, including the last 130 miles after its motor burned out.

The MIT car had a $20,000 nickel cadmium battery. Caltech's car was powered by 20 lead cobalt batteries costing $600. Both cars used direct current traction motors.

Kennett Man Dies of Self Inflicted Shot

KENNETT - William C. Madden, 31, who had been living with his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. D. G. Cash of Kennett route two since April, was found fatally wounded at the Cash home by another sister Mrs. Chloe Davis of Kennett, at 3:10 p.m. Wednesday.

Madden apparently had shot himself in the forehead with a .22 caliber rifle, which was found by his side in his room at the Cash home, according to Sheriff Raymond Scott. Scott said Dr. Quinton Tarver, county coroner, had investigated and there would be no inquest.

The brother-in-law, D. G. Cash, said that he and a helper were working on a cotton picker near the house at the time the shooting incident occurred but did not hear the shot because of noise made by the machine. The sister, Mrs. Davis, drove up to the Cash home and walked in and found her brother seriously wounded. An ambulance was called but Madden was pronounced dead on arrival at Dunklin County Memorial Hospital.

According to the family, Madden was separated from his wife who, along with their two daughters, live in Madison, Ill. They said he had been ill for some time and been unable to work.

His mother, Mrs. Artie Maddox, lives in Kennett.

The body is at McDaniel Funeral Home.

Burglars Strike At Malden

MALDEN - A series of break-ins and thefts hit the southside of Malden this past week, as three firms were burglarized in the same block.

The Southside Liquor Store on Highway 25, South was burglarized Tuesday night and thieves made off with 150 half-pints of assorted whiskey. Entrance to the building was gained through the side door. An attempt to break into the liquor store was made Wednesday night of last week, however the persons responsible were unable to gain entrance through the drive-in window.

Wednesday thieves entered the Marine Gas Station next door to the liquor store. Missing was $115 out of vending machines; 15 cartons of cigarettes; two tires and an electric drill. Entrance was gained through a garage window.

Apparently not satisified, the thieves are believed to have attempted a burglary at Kirksey Motor Co., across the highway. The front door of the firm was broken inot, however it is believed the person, or persons, were frightened in the attempt and left the building before taking any loot. Nothing was reported missing after the break-in was discovered.

The Dunklin County sheriff's department state highway patrol and police are investigating the breakins and thefts.

Citizen's Tip Lead To Powells' Arrest

POPLAR BLUFF - The remaining two suspects sought in the Puxico bank robbery were apprehended Wednesday afternoon by state troopers after a tip was received from a citizen.

The suspects, Robert Lynn Powell, 23, and a woman identified as his wife, Jerilea Espe, Powell, 22, were arrested in a cabin at Ates and Johnnies Resort at New Wappapello. The patrol had received a telephone call telling officers that a red Volkswagen sought in the case was hidden at the rear of a cabin.

Sgt. Jack Pritchard and Trooper Billie Kincade, both of Dexter, were dispatched to the scene and arrested the Powells. They were taken to Butler County Jail.

Powell is wanted on an armed robbery warrant from St. Francois county, charging him with the May 18 robbery of the Bank of Leadwood in that county. He gave a Seattle, address, but is a native of St. Francois county.

The Powells were charged with the Puxico bank robbery by Stoddard County Prosecuting Attorney Paul McGhee of Dexter.

Four other suspects in the $18,000 robbery of the Puxico State Bank were arrested Tuesday afternoon after the bank was held up by three men.

Arrested earlier were Fred Leon Kimble, 27, and his woman companion who said she was Del Irene Swafford, 20. Both gave St. Louis addresses. Also arrested Tuesday were Gary Wayne Harkins, 28, and Doris Lorine Harkins, 21, his wife, or Irondale. The Harkins posted $25,000 bond each and were released from jail Wednesday.

Harkins was arrested by state troopers on a charge of failing to transfer a vehicle license. He was arrested after leaving a local motel, where he and his wife had spent Wednesday night.

Harkins was brought before MagistrateJudge Jack Jolly this morning on the license violation, a misdemeanor charge, and waived arraignments. He posted a $5500 bond and trial on the misdemeanor was set for 2 p.m., Sept. 12.

The Powells, Kimble and Mrs. Swafford were taken to Bloomfield for arraignment on the bank robbery charges and were to be returned to Butler county jail.

Federal, state and county officers continued the search today for the $18,000 in cash taken Tuesday afternoon from the Puxico bank. The loot and possibly the guns used in the robbery are believed to be hidden in the Wappapello Dam area.

Scattered items of clothing believed worn by the robbers, as well as their stocking masks and gloves, have been recovered by citizens and by the officers.

Dirksen Shows No Loss Of Form During Recess

WASHINGTON (AP) — It was a sure sign Congress was back in session. The champion of the marigold, the protector of birds was holding court.

Sen. Everett McKinley Dirksen, Republican minority leader from Pekin, Ill., was perched on a table in the Senate press gallery with a cup of coffee in his hand cigarettes nearby, holding his weekly news conference for the first time in a month.

Tousle-haired and irrepressible as ever, not even a story about a report that he was marked for assassination escaped the wry touch.

"I don't want my head blown off," Dirksen said he told police after one of three reports of threats on his life.

"I've got flowers in bloom and they need me. I've got 65 bird feeders now and the birds need me," he said.

But the news conference, darting as usual from anecdote to reminiscence to hard answers, touched on more than birds, flowers and assassination.

What did he think of chances the Senate would confirm Abe Fortas' nomination as chief justice?

"Not roseate," he intoned.

Did he think President Johnson should withdraw the nomination?

"I don't know what the President should or shouldn't do. I'm not the president. I should be but I'm not."

A search for his views on whether the Senate should return for more business after the elections somehow wandered into an account of how a florists' association gave him a gold rose as an award and the report that his own golden tea roses "are doing beautifully this year."

All entries must be in the hands of the Parade Marshal, Chuck Lewis, on or before September 23, 1968.

All floats and entries shall be physically identified as to name of participating group, to be eligible for any prize. Floats or entries do not necessarily have to portray the Cotton Carnival theme. However, every possible reference to the Cotton and its uses will naturally publicize one of SEMO's top products and industries.

All floats should be motor driven or motor drawn. Floats will be judged on originality, design and attractiveness. Nothing shall be thrown or distributed from any vehicle within the parade.

All entries shall assemble North of Tanner Street on North Ranney Street not later than 9:45 A.M., on the morning of September 28th. Postions in the parade will be designated by the Parade Marshall and announced courtesy of the Daily Sikeston Standard, prior to September 27th.

SCHOOL'S OPEN CAMPAIGN BEGUN BY AUTO CLUB

The Missouri Auto Club is launching its 36th annual September School Opening Safety Campaign by reminding motorists that "School's Open — Drive Carefully."

Auto Club Safety Director Tom Reel pointed out that more children than ever before will be making the trek back to the blackboard and books, and that many of them will be attending school for the first time — unaware of the hazards of crossing congested intersections, streets, and highways. "After a summer of fun and play, children sometimes forget to exercise that extra degree of caution when going to and from school," Mr. Reel said. "It's up to the individual motorist to watch for the school bound youngsters."

In emphasizing the need for all drivers to be "child alert" this fall, especially in the vicinity of school and playgrounds, the Auto Club will post 12,000 posters and will distribute 21,000 bumper strips throughout its territory.

Mr. Reel urged all drivers to cooperate with members of the School Safety Patrol in protecting their classmates and pointed out the need for increased safety consciousness on the part of motorists in areas where there are no School Safety Patrols or other means of protection provided to safeguard the school children.

Help make this September the safest back-to-school month ever. Remember "School's Open — Drive Carefully!"

Year-Round Summer

SUMMER IS SLIPPING AWAY but indoors it remains fresh with the use of flowers and plants as decorative touches. This room is a potting "shed" out of the ordinary that extends growing time year-round. Plants are mobile in clay pots, with extra shelves designed for storage to hold repotting supplies. Guests enjoy the outdoor touches while seated on fiberglass furniture with brightly patterned cushions of latex foam.

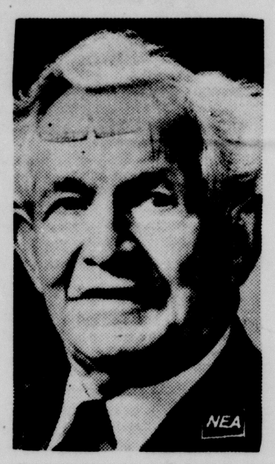
BULBOUS BOW of the Queen Elizabeth 2, perched on the ways before launching in Scotland, is designed for stability, but, paradoxically, it is used to contain the ship's store of 13,000 gallons of draft beer.

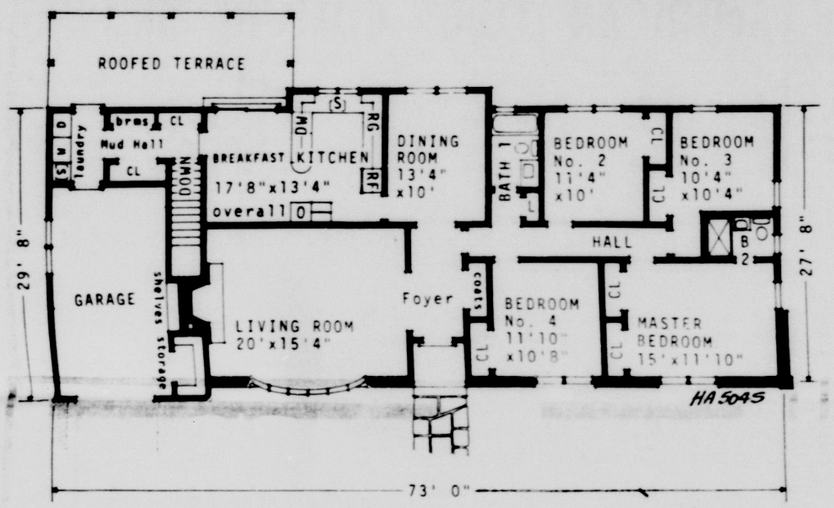
Patterns of Fall

TWO LOOKS FOR FALL—Fashion hemlines can be long, short, or in-between this season. At left, a mini shirtdress in bold red and gray cotton sailcloth takes matching solid-colored shorts. At right, the midi length is depicted in twin cotton prints for an at-home casual. Both outfits are included in the "Cavalcade of Cottons," a loan fashion service sponsored by the Cotton Producers Institute and McCall's Patterns. The complete program-in-a-package is available to women's clubs within the continental United States. New collections featuring 25 all-occasion cottons are offered for fall-winter and spring-summer showings. For information, write the Cotton Producers Institute, P. O. Box 12253, Memphis, Tennessee 38112.



MORMON LEADER David O. McKay, president of the three-million-member world-wide Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, will observe his 95th birthday Sept. 8. Only recently, McKay gave up horseback riding at his mountain ranch home north of Salt Lake City, Utah.

HOMES FOR AMERICANS



THE FOUR-BEDROOM HOUSEHOLD will enjoy the spacious comfort of this moderate home. A foyer separates the living area and bedrooms. The dining room, kitchen and breakfast room are all in the back. In addition there is a mud hall and laundry behind the garage, with ready access from backyard to kitchen or basement and to and from the garage. A roofed terrace is reached by sliding glass doors in the breakfast room for outdoor entertaining. Plan HA504S has 1,510 square feet. It was designed by Herbert Struppmann, Room 704, 48 W. 48th St., New York, N.Y. 10036.

SURROUNDED BY SHIP, it appears that the Statue of Liberty is being carried off. Such is not the case, however, this statue is a plastic and metal replica of the New York landmark. It was made in Rome and brought to the United States as a prop for a new film.

EAR FOR MUSIC is not what inspired "Calamity Jane's" owner to provide the horse with a transistor radio. Bells, firecrackers and shotgun blasts are played over the radio to accustom the horse to loud noises which it is likely to hear during a parade. Six weeks' training are required to ready the animal for parade duty.

LINED before her time? This model is looking through a new defrosting rear window for automobiles. Narrow strips of a ceramic-metal mixture on the window are heated electrically, quickly clearing fog and mist and assisting in removal of ice and snow. Developed by PPG Industries, the new windows will be available on several 1969 model autos.

CAMERA Angles

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

A new automatic focusing system for home movie cameras and a new approach in making lip-synchronized sound movies by amateur photographers were jointly introduced by Bell & Howell at a recent press preview in New York City.

The ingenious focusing system — called Focus-Matic — uses principles of trigonometry to achieve accurate distance measurements.

The new home movie sound system — called Filmosound 8 — links electronically three basic items of equipment: a movie camera, a cassette tape recorder and a movie projector, to provide lip-synchronized sound to accompany the movies. Though engineered for Filmosound, each unit can be used individually as a conventional piece of equipment to film and show silent movies or to record and play sound.

Focus-Matic is featured in two new super 8mm movie cameras for the Filmosound system. In use, the camera is tilted downward and the movie maker looks at the feet of a person or the base of any subject being photographed so that it coincides with a horizontal line in the viewfinder. By pressing a button, a reading of the distance in feet is recorded on a built-in distance scale.

In Autoload model 442, the button also automatically focuses the lens to the distance measured. Model 436 is manually set to the distance shown and then is ready for movie making.

With Filmosound 8, the words and sounds of home movie subjects are recorded to match precisely with every picture taken by the camera. During projection, every word and sound played back on the tape recorder is matched with every movement on the screen.

It is achieved by teaming the camera and tape recorder as a filming unit and then teaming the tape recorder and projector as a viewing unit. A single cord is all that is required to connect and operate camera and recorder during the filming. Another cord connects recorder and projector.

The sound center of the Filmosound 8 system is a portable cassette tape recorder model 450. It features solid state audio and synchronous electronics, push button operation and automatic or manual volume control for recording. It uses compact four-minute tape cassettes for recording and playback with home movies. These match the filming time for super 8 movie cartridges. The cassette comes in a container with storage space for its matching reel of film.

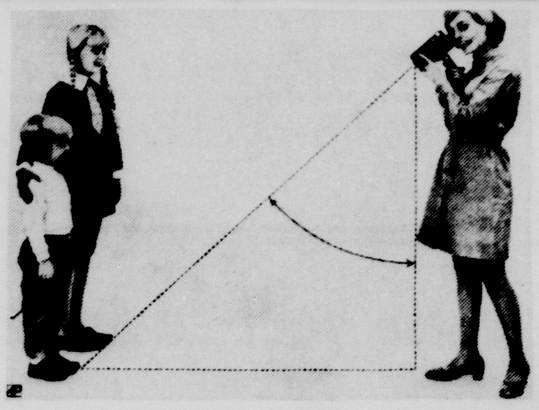
The recorder also accepts standard cassettes which record and play up to two hours.

Projector for the Filmosound 8 system is Autoload model 458 which has dual control to show regular 8mm films as well as super 8.

Bell & Howell's unique sound synchronization is attained by a light device in the camera that marks the edge of the film at the beginning of a scene. During filming, sounds from the microphone are recorded magnetically on the audio track of the cassette tape, while an 18-frame-per-second pulsed signal is recorded on the electronic synchronous-control track of the tape.

During projection, the light mark on the processed film controls starting of the tape recorder and the pulsing signal serves as a speed control for the projector, keeping both picture and sound in frame-by-frame synchronization.

Since the cameras, projector and tape recorder in the Filmosound system are priced only slightly higher than comparable conventional equipment, lip-synchronized talking home movies might be within budget reach of average home movie fans. At least, it's another talking point.



NEW FOCUSING SYSTEM for super 8mm movie cameras is introduced by two new Bell & Howell's Focus-Matic cameras. By sighting subject's feet on a horizontal line in the viewfinder, and touching a button, the distance between subject and camera lens is automatically measured. The new cameras are part of a new home movie sound system, also introduced.

Doctor's Careless Talk Causes Mother to Worry

Dear Ann Landers: I hope you can answer a very important question for me. I am unable to eat or sleep and will go out of my mind if I don't learn the truth soon.

Many years ago, when I was 16, I became pregnant. The father was a young fellow I had been dating. He was four years older than I and marriage was not on his mind.

Someone told us that if I took ergot or quinine all our troubles would be over. I was about six weeks along and I tried both, but nothing happened. So we were married a few weeks later. Surprisingly enough, we have been quite happy and now we have five lovely children.

Last month our eldest son complained of backaches. We sent him to a specialist for X-rays and he received the results today. He was told he has two vertebrae missing. The cartilage is there but not the bone. The specialist informed him it is a condition the doctors are expecting in the next generation as a result of LSD and other drugs the hippies are taking. He jokingly asked the boy, "What did YOUR mother do anyway?"

Ann, please tell me if the ergot and quinine I took early in the pregnancy injured this boy. I must know the truth, even if it's the worst. Much obliged.
---LOAD ON MY MIND

Dear Mind: My medical consultants have assured me that ergot and quinine taken during pregnancy does not produce a deformity in the fetus. So stop worrying. (P.S. Someone should give that doctor 10 lashes with an old stethoscope. What a stupid thing to have said to the boy!)

Dear Ann Landers: I am a woman of 68 and I have a rather touchy question to ask. For over 40 years I have been friends with a certain lady who lives in the next block. Agatha tells people she is 73 but she is really much closer to 80.

This woman always wore thick glasses, even as a young person. I am sure her eyesight has failed badly in the last five years. I am also concerned about her deafness. Agatha wears a hearing aid but misses a lot in spite of it. She drives her own car and has been very good about asking me if I want a ride to church, Sewing Circle and club meetings. Sometimes we go visiting or to the movies together.

My children have begged me not to ride with Agatha anymore. They say she is blind and deaf and it's a miracle we haven't had an accident. Frankly, we've had some close calls but we have never actually hit anything or anybody. I would like your candid advice.
--- FOUR LEAF CLOVER

Dear Leaf: Don't push your luck, Mother. You've been pretty darned fortunate -- so far.

Level with Agatha and urge her to share your taxi. Explain the situation as gently as you can. Better to lose her friendship than your life.

What is French kissing? Is it wrong? Who should set the necking limits -- the boy or the girl? Can a shotgun wedding succeed? Read Ann Landers' booklet, "Teenage Sex -- Ten Ways To Cool It." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

If You Were the Judge

Woman's Color Choice Not Subject to Law

By Jack Strauss, LL. B.

Clara showed a lot of style and normally her style showed a lot of her. But one dark night, Charley maintained, she couldn't be seen at all. Dressed from top to bottom in black, she was crossing the street when he bumped her with one of the fenders of his automobile. Bouncing into the air, Clara bounced Charley into court where she sued him for her injuries.

"A pedestrian should be seen and not hurt," Clara argued in court.

"That's true," Charley conceded in turn, "but, Clara couldn't be seen. Wearing black clothes on a black night made her invisible. In fact, if anyone was responsible forthe accident, the fault was hers for wearing a black dress on a black night. It was pure carelessness. Therefore, she's not entitled to collect a penny. What's more, she should be made to pay for my dented fender."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit the "invisible" Clara to collect for her injuries?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! He held that, as a matter of law, a woman cannot be deemed careless for choosing to wear a particular color; that for her to wear a black dress on a dark night is not carelessness.

INTERESTING PHONE CALL

Perhaps the most interesting private telephone call of the Democratic convention was received by Vice President Humphrey from Hyannis Port, Mass., on Tuesday, one day before the nominations, just as the Kennedy boom reached its height. Sen. Teddy Kennedy, sole surviving male member of the Kennedy family, was on the line.

"I want to read you a statement I am planning to make," he informed the Vice President.

"Before you read it," replied Humphrey, "I want to say something."

He then told Kennedy of the high regard he had for him and expressed the very sincere hope that he might accept the Vice Presidential nomination.

Sen. Kennedy thanked him but declined. He mentioned his obligation to the Kennedy family, inherited from his late brothers.

Humphrey then said that as his second choice for Vice-President he was considering Sargent Shriver, now ambassador to France and a Kennedy brother-in-law. Humphrey added that he had heard the Kennedy Family had some objections. He said he did not want to pick Shriver if this was the case.

Humphrey did not go into detail, but he had in mind the reported Kennedy line of succession and the opposition of the family to having Shriver get in the way of having Teddy run for President later.

Sen. Kennedy indicated to Humphrey in reply that the Kennedy veto on Shriver had not been withdrawn. He then read the Vice President his statement killing the Kennedy boom for President.

NOTE: Friends of the Kennedy family say that Teddy turned down the Vice-Presidency because his wife pleaded that the Kennedys have enough dead heroes. Cardinal Cushing of Boston, the family spiritual adviser, also counseled Ted not to risk another tragedy.

Other intimates of the family say that Kennedy will pick up the standard of his fallen brothers later. At 37 he believes that he is now too young to become either President or Vice President.

Dear Editor:

We certainly do have problems in our "Liberal"-Socialist State. Now we're in trouble again! The Government only gave the Watts district a four hundred thousand dollar bonus for the latest Riot. Who can say it was not better organized than the first one? Probably wasn't as good on T.V.!!

Now, the Revolutionists will be underpaid, and may not be able to afford private trasportation to Del mar Race Track. Maybe the National Council of Churches will use some of the funds given them be the A.F.L.-C.I.O., and bus them to the track.

Of course, then somebody would have to bus a lot of white people to the track to make racial balance. Than we'd have to bus a lot of rich people to balance with so many poor people.

While some of the top "Liberals" of the country who engineered these problems are in Chicago, let's ask them about the seven and nine tenths million dollar "riot control" fund from which the Watts bonus came?

When they say "Riot Control" do they mean upwards or downwards? Do they mean toward more riots, or less riots? If they give these riot districts a bonus for each riot, they must want more and better riots! Then they must be going by the U.N. Charter instead of the U.S. Constitution. The U.N. Charter gives preference to Human and Rest Room rights, plus Social Change.

If they are going to spread almost eight million dollars in getting bigger and better riots, then we'll run out of country before we run out of money.

Sincerely,
George Spriesterbach

The Prayer from The Upper Room

I bow my knees before the Father . . . that Christ may dwell in your hearts through faith; that you, being rooted and grounded in love, may . . . know the love of Christ which surpasses knowledge. (Ephesians 3:17, 17-19, RSV)

PRAYER: Father, may we speak for Thee in love, remembering that we must speak the truth in love if the truth would reach the hearts of those who hear. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Attractive Book Holder Made From Coat Hanger

By POLLY CRAMER

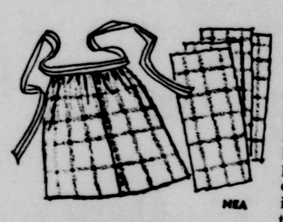
DEAR POLLY—I like to keep books that I read often in my bedroom and like to have pretty bookends for them. Since there are small children around the house they are not safe. I made myself an attractive book holder they cannot break. I took a wire coat hanger pushed down on the hook until both top and bottom wires were about even, spread them apart about three inches, and then bent both curving ends up a few inches. I decorated mine with artificial flowers and it looks very pretty on my desk or a table.—PEGGY

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—How do you and the other girls use up odds and ends of bias tape?—HAZEL

DEAR POLLY—I have a solution to the problem: "Could someone please tell me if paper white narcissus bloom more than once? If so, how would one care for the bulbs to get them to bloom again?" I am 12 years old and got the answer out of an encyclopedia. It said: "In general, the garden species succeed best in well-drained garden soil of medium texture and richness. The bulbs should be planted in the autumn, about five inches deep and three inches apart. They should not be disturbed until they appear to be failing, perhaps about three years. Then, when the foliage has died down, the clumps may be dug up, divided, cleaned and stored in a cool place until planting time."—ROBERT

DEAR POLLY—I want to tell Enda that my nursery man says that bulbs which have been forced (indoor planting) should not be forced again. My birthday is in January and every year my husband gives me new paper white narcissus bulbs which are planted among pebbles in a shallow pottery planter. After they have bloomed and the leaves dried naturally, I put them in the basement to dry out for replanting in the garden when the ground thaws. So you see they do bloom again but not in the house. I do hope Edna has as much success with her bulbs as I have had during past years. —D. W. A.



DEAR POLLY—For an unusual and practical wedding shower gift, I buy six matching dish towels and sew two of the towels together, lengthwise, and gather the top edge onto a tape or ribbon band to make an apron. The apron and four matching dish towels make a gift anyone is pleased to receive. —MRS. E. J. P.

DEAR POLLY—Ladies like Gladys who have to buy long underwear so husbands can wear those scratchy suits probably find the cotton knits with long legs fit so close to the skin that they are too warm except in cold weather so my man prefers the long cotton pajama pants. I have even bought extra ones, without tops, through a catalogue. Great savings! —CAROL

Vaccination

The word vaccination stems from the Latin "vacca," meaning "a cow," because Edward Jenner was the first to discover and make use of inoculation among farm workers who had developed cowpox, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

Flag Raising

Community Affairs Agency Makes Strides Under Bollinger

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Department of Community Affairs is still in its infancy but under the direction of W.T. Bollinger of Van Buren its impact is beginning to be felt around the state.

The agency started as the Office of Urban Affairs and was later transformed into the Office of State and Regional Planning and Community Development before assuming its present form.

It is an entirely new department, filling one of the vacant spots left by the late Gov. Phil M. Donnelly under the 1945 Constitution to cover just such a contingency.

Its acting director is an intense, wiry man who served in the house with Gov. Warren E. Hearnes. He has fired some personnel, shifted others and has tried to revitalize the agency, which has had its troubles at times in its brief existence.

One of its biggest jobs is to act as go-between for local city and county officials and the federal government. The proliferation of federal programs has been so great that most cities would never find out what could be done with federal grants and loans without this liaison agency.

Heading the Office of Governmental Services is H. Randolph Halsey, who plans a series of meetings around the state to "stimulate interest and awareness of federal - state services available to meet local problems."

The first of the 15 meetings will be held at Joplin Sept. 15.

As Bollinger puts it, "we will take the federal and state programs to the people. The people will decide what programs—if any—they want to pursue. This is a grass roots effort to wipe away the red tape in assistance programs and to let the communities themselves initiate their future development."

In one of its recent projects, department aided Kansas City officials in planning the development of the new Kansas City International Airport there.

Larry E. Gridley, director of planning consulted with Kansas City officials, whom he knew as a former staff member of the Kansas City Metropolitan Planning Commission and a planner for the Air Force in Kansas City.

Within days, the governor presented a check for $25,000 to the Kansas City Planning Commission as state help in the project.

Still being developed is Missouri's part under the new Crime Control and Safe Streets Act.

Charles A. Gallipeau, chief counsel for the department and former Jackson County assistant prosecuting attorney, and Col. E. I. Hockaday, superintendent of the Missouri Highway patrol, have put their heads together on this problem. Gallipeau recently attended a two-day conference on the subject held by the Council of State Governments and the Justice Department in Washington.

As a result, Missouri was one of the first states to seek federal aid under the new law.

One of the devices being used to channel federal funds to local communities is the formation of regional planning commissions. Missouri stands near the top in this effort with 13 regions organized and five more in the planning stage.

This work is handled by Hurshel E. Crass, former mayor and police judge of Van Buren. He flies his own plane and often visits a dozen communities within a week.

One of the projects of which Bollinger is proudest is the training of 34 high school graduates this summer in an engineering "crash course" at the University of Missouri's Rolla campus.

All were chosen from Kansas City and St. Louis poverty areas. They were trained as aides to professional engineers and most found jobs with starting salaries up to $4,000 a year.

It is believed to be the first such program where government reached into ghetto areas, took youths to college and found them promising jobs after training them. The extension service of the university and the Department of Community Affairs joined forces on this project.

Bollinger believes the department also has contributed to a "cool" summer in St. Louis. One of its men, William Patrick Magee, was assigned to work with social and welfare officials to help keep St. Louis youths occupied.

The department also has an office working on problems of aging but its program is still in the beginning stages.

Thus far the legislature has not provided any funds or methods to deal with pressing urban problems but the department is expected to be in the forefront if and when such programs are approved.

Bollinger has expressed strong opposition to mere "handout" programs. His idea is to clear the way for cities and people to help themselves.

"We've got a working organization," he says, "and there is no place we can go but up. We want to make Missouri a better place in which to live, and we are on the right road."

ROAD TO IMPROVEMENT

PORT ELIZABETH, South Africa (AP) — Bus firm manager Rollo Dickson felt his company needed some livening up, so he put this slogan on one of his buses: "As comfortable as your car, these new buses — even on Heugh Road."

Heugh Road was known as one of the roughest in the city. Apparently the city council took note, because Heugh Road now has a smooth new surface.

And the new slogan on Dickson's bus reads: "Now every bit as comfortable as your car, these new buses — especially on Heugh Road. Thank you, Mr. City Engineer!"

Revised Plans Submitted For I-57 Cairo Bridge

CAIRO - The Illinois and Missouri highway department have submitted revised plans to the commander of the Second Coast Guard district at St. Louis for the I-57 bridge to be built across the Mississippi River at mile 7.5 near Cairo.

The revised plans provide for a fixed highway bridge with two navigation spans. The main span would provide a clear horizontal opening of 800 feet above elevation 322.0 feet m.s.l., two per cent flood flowline. The auxiliary span would provide a clear horizontal opening of 500 feet between the piers with a minimum vertical clearance of 55 feet above the two percent flood flowline.

The original plans, which were rejected by the coast guard in May, called for a horizontal clearance of 650 feet in the main channel span and 450 feet in an adjacent auxiliary span. A minimum vertical clearance of 55 feet above water elevation exceeded two percent of the time would have been provided in the main channel span; with vertical clearance of 48.6 feet in the adjacent auxiliary span. The American Waterways Operators, Inc., obejected to both the horizontal and vertical clearances provided in the original plans, stating that wider navigational openings in the bridge were needed to handle present and projected river traffic.

Comments on the revised plans are to be submitted to the Commander, Second Coast Guard District, St. Louis by Sen. 26.

The six true grain plants, or cereals, of the world are corn, wheat, barley, rice, oats and rye.

Air Cushion Vehicle Tests To Begin Soon

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The nation's first tracked air cushion vehicle is expected to begin test run within six weeks at Warren, Mich.

The target date is Oct. 1, according to Howard R. Ross, manager of advanced planning studies for Transportation Technology, a division of Sverdrup & Parcel and Associates, Inc. of St. Louis.

Ross disclosed the target date and some details about the vehicle at the opening session Wednesday of the ninth annual meeting of the Transportation Research Forum.

Ross said the vehicle wil be powered by a linear induction electric motor, is designed to carry five persons and will be tested over a track, or a guideway, 160 feet long.

The linear induction electric motor was described by some engineers at the meeting as "the leading candidate for the propulsion system of the future.

It involves a coupling of magnetic force between elements in the track and the car and provides a propulsion, which theoretically has hardly any speed limitation.

EXPLAINING A SUGARBEET and Russian sunflower growing experiments at the field day tour at Delta Center, Portageville, is Dr. James A. Roth, right, soil fertility research. Lloyd Treece, assistant to Dr. W.P. Sappenfield, cotton breeder, holds the microphone, and tour guide. The sugarbeet project is in foreground, and the sunflower project in the background.

400 Inspect Research Fields at Portageville

By LEO SCHADE

PORTAGEVILLE--The University of Missouri Delta Center field day tour drew more than 400 Thursday.

The tour six miles southeast of Portageville was in two parts morning and afternoon tour with five projects received in each.

Foremost were field projects, including a new cotton variety, a new Russian sunflower project, and continued work on a sugar beet project.

Weed control, irrigation, corn insects and tomato growing were explained in field demonstrations in the morning tour.

Cotton irrigation was outlined by Leonard Hand, meteorologist, Delta Center; a tomato breeding project, in charge of Hank DiCarlo, horticulture agent, Delta Center; control of weeks in cotton by Harold Kerr, weed control research, Delta Center; control of weeds in soybeans, Curtis Royster, technician research, Delta Center; and corn insects and virus disease control, Armon Keaster, corn entomologist research, Delta Center.

W. P. Sappenfield, cotton breeder research, Delta Center, explained the new Mo-Del cotton variety, now in its seventh year of experiment and to be released on the market next year. The plant has a high fiber texture, with a one and one-sixteenth staple length, and will produce under various types of seasons without high loss.

The plant has been crossed with other cotton varieties to obtain the greatest insect control, including the bollworm. The textile industry has long sought a new variety that would meet the demand of a competitive market and the new variety will provide a high quality fiber.

The new variety of sunflower seed project was shown with three types grown at the Center this year for the first time. The varieties have a high oil quality, which has been placed on the world market in competition with the soybean industry.

The varieties according to James A. Roth, soil fertility research, Delta Center, planted Mar. 27, were Semena and Armaveric. Peredovik, was planted June 15. The results will not be known until the fall harvest, but are said to produce 750-800 pounds oil per acre, and 400 pounds of hulls. Seed cost per acre is about $1.35. The crop would fit in following a wheat harvest.

The sugarbeet, Dr. Roth explained, is as high a quality in sugar content as is now grown in sugarbeet regions and the industry hopes to make the Bootheel one of their top future production areas. Production can be as high as 20 tons per acre and range in price from $15-$17. The tops have a high protein content for livestock feed.

Dr. William Bugbee, plant pathologist, discussed cotton seedling and best results in spacing of rows for production and disease control.

E.B. Nace, farm management agent Delta Center, demonstrated grain sorghum fields, which produced a market value comparable to corn. Bird resistant varieties were shown the tour group. Two crops can be planted in one year. Nace also explained soybean varieties.

Dr. Leo Duclos showed soybean experiment results over one to four year averages per acres. On the four-year average of 13 varieties, the production was from a low of 19.8 to 35.4 bushels; two year average on 16 varieties, 15.9 to 35.5 bushels, and 1967 average on 18 varieties from 18.6 to 33 bushels.

The experiments include a New York variety that had a three year average of 44.4 bushels per acre, but had no cyst nematode resistance.

Joe Scott, soil fertility research, Delta Center, explained a field soybean project, telling of the results of three planting dates, May 2, June 4 and July 8. The best early planting results were with 24-inch row spacing.

Severe Weather Watch Formed for Sikeston

Twenty four persons joined a severe weather watch system network to protect the Sikeston area at a meeting of the Bootheel Citizen Band Radio club Thursday night at the Security National Bank.

By sighting a tornado 15 or more minutes before it strikes lives can be saved, Joseph A. Wunderlich, Poplar Bluff, curl defense captain, said. Even five minutes warning in an emergency can mean the difference between life and death. If a storm is reported all residents should tune-in to the local radio stations. Both Sikeston stations are equipped for early weather warning.

A system of SWWS networks in being organized for Southeast Missouri by Wunderlich.He was the principal speaker last night.

Networks have been organized in Poplar Bluff, Dexter, Campbell, Greenville and New Madrid, Another is being organized in Kennett. Others are planned for Bloomfield, Marble Hill, Jacs Jackson, Cape Girardeau, Benton, Charleston, and Caruthersville.

All volunteer weather observers in the community watch program, will be trained in observation and reporting of thunderstorms, tornadoes, funnel sightings, hail and high winds.

The training will be conducted through coordinated efforts of the commander of the individual network and Wunderlich with the use of weather bureau bulletins and pamphlets.

Farmers, service station operators, delivery men or anyone who normally works outside and has access to a two-way radio may be members of the network. City, and county law enforcement officers, civil defense agencies also will assist as volunteer observers.

Each network of the system appoints a commander and sets up an emergency operation center with appointed monitoring stations. The commander will be responsible upon receiving a report of unusual weather conditions from an observer to call the weather bureau in St. Louis reporting the condition sighted. Local radio stations will be among the first persons called by the commander to warn residents of the danger and advise them of safety precautions.

Wunderlich suggested a system of siren warnings should be employed here so residents will be better prepared.

All commanders will assist other towns in setting up a weather watch system and assist in post disaster relief programs.

Wunderlich explained that the systems are being organized throughout the state. Tornadoes usually travel from the southwest to the northeast. About 70 per cent of tornadoes occur in the midwest from March through June.

Tornado weather is hot humid days with southerly winds, and dark heavy clouds normally moving in from the southwest. Funnel-shaped clouds exending down to the earth from the base of a thundercloud indicates the forming of a tornado. If one is observed, call the local radio stations, Wunderlich said.

Don Allen, Sikeston, president of the Bootheel CB Club, or Dick Mays, Sikeston, may be contacted by anyone interested in joining the network for the Sikeston area.

Cong Battalion Uses Human Shields to Break U.S. Cordon

SAIGON (AP) — A veteran Viet Cong battalion, herding women and children in front as human shields smashed into a company of American paratroopers in three waves early today. Thirty-one Americans were killed and 27 wounded.

The waves of troops from the Viet Cong's Cu Chi Regiment broke through a company from the U.S. 101st Airborne Division 26 miles northwest of Saigon. The Viet Cong and the paratroopers were still locked in battle as night fell.

Thirty-one Viet Cong have been reported killed so far.

AP photographer Max Nash reported from the battlefield that many of the Americans were killed by the Viet Cong as they lay wounded on the field.

The battle was one of three fought northwest and southwest of Saigon today in which, according to incomplete reports, at least 110 of the enemy were killed and 150 persons seized as suspected Viet Cong.

A Communist defector had told U.S. intelligence officers that Viet Cong troops were meeting Thursday in the village of Ap Trang Dau, nine miles from a major allied military base housing the headquarters of the U.S. 25th Infantry Division and a South Vietnamese training base for rangers.

Troops from the 25th Division put a cordon around the village, and the Viet Cong tried unsuccessfully three times to break out.

Suddenly, Nash reported, about 300 enemy troops charged through rice paddies into one American paratroop company 150 yards away. The came in three waves. At command headquarters in Cu Chi, the voice of a radio operator came through: "They are coming, they are coming." Then the radio went dead.

U.S. officers said the first wave of enemy troops came running shoulder-to-shoulder through the night, screaming, firing assault rifles and pushing women and children in front of them as human shields.

After breaking the cordon, the enemy vanished into the darkness, leaving 31 of their own dead on the battlefield. Nash said some of the third wave enemy troops had bamboo poles with them to carry off some of their dead.

Six Injured in Three Collisions

Seven were injured in three highway accidents Thursday, the state patrol reported.

In a two car collision on the Johnson Island road, south of highway 25 near Kennett, at 4:15 p.m., a 1956 Ford, driven by J.D. Easley, 16, Kennett, failed to stop at an intersection, and was struck in the left side by a 1968 Ford, driven by Joann Wells, 39, Kennett, the patrol said.

Easley received a fractured skull and bruises to his face. The Wells woman received a bruised right knee, and cuts on her neck.

Both were taken to Dunklin County Memorial hospital in Kennett.

Three were injured at 6:10 p.m., on a country road, near Biehle in Perry county.

A 1960 Ford, driven by Fay Rose Kutz, 18, Perryville, and a 1966 Dodge, driven by Melvin Ranaud, 31, Perryville, met headon on a crest of a hill on the gravel road.

Miss Kutz received a broken nose. She was taken to Perry County Memorial hospital, in Perryville.

Ranaud received bruises on his head and chest injuries; and a passenger, Rhonda Sue Ranaud, three, received bruises on her body and face. Both were treated by a Perryville physician.

Emanuel Lee Reeger, 72, Chaffee, driver of a 1963 Buick, was injured at 9:55 a.m., on highway 25, one mile north of Advance.

Reeger was northbound on highway 25, when a 1955 Chevrolet, driven by Arthur D. Dalton, 58, Advance, pulled from a side road into the path of his car.

Reeger received cuts on his right ear, and a bruised left arm and hand. He was taken to Southeast Missouri hospital in Cape Girardeau.

Dalton was given a summons, the patrol said, for failure to yield right-of-way, and for not having an operator's license.

Fall, Bite, Sting, Ball Bat Injure

Four were admitted to the emergency room of the Missouri Delta Community hospital Thursday:

Bill L. Smith, Lilbourn, fell through a glass door at home, cutting right forearm; Richard J. St. Mary, New Madrid, bitten by spider on right side of back; Robert Turnage, Oran, stung by wasp on back of head and Gary J. Towel, Morehouse, hit in head with ball bat.

Skunk Attacks Man in Alley

A skunk lurking in the alley behind the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. on Center St., tried to bite a man leaving the office at about 10 p.m. Thursday.

Jim Tolson, Cape Girardeau, an employe of the company working here, reported the incident to police. He said the skunk attacked him, but did not bite. He called police, because he thought the skunk might have rabies.

Grocery Manager Robbed

FLAT RIVER, Mo. (AP)-A man armed with a pistol robbed a Flat River grocery manager of $8,300 today and then locked the victim in the trunk of his car.

Local officers and a Missouri Highway Patrol airplane joined in search for the robber who drove off with another man.

The manager of the Federal IGA store, Donald Straus, had just stepped out of his automobile when he was met by the robber. Straus was carrying the money in a bank sack which he said was for use in the store's operation today.

The robber told Straus:

' I'm nervous, don't make me do what I don't want to do."

He took the sack and locked the manager in the truck of his car. Straus was released by workmen unloading a grocery truck who reported they saw a car with two men speed out of the parking lot.

Nixon to Visit Springfield

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) - Republican presidential nominee Richard M. Nixon will arrive about noon Sept. 19 by air for a campaign rally at Municipal Airport in Springfield.

The announcement was made today by Rep. Durward G. Hall, R-Mo., and by Gene Taylor of Sarcoxie, Republican national committeeman.

The Nixon visit is scheduled to last about an hour and will come after an earlier appearance that day in Salt Lake City. He will leave from here for an afternoon stop in Peoria, Ill., and is scheduled for an evening telecast that night from New York City.

In the announcement Hall commented on Nixon's stop that "I think we can assure him of a real old-fashioned Ozark welcome, not unlike the one he received during the 1960 campaign."

Nixon carried Missouri's 7th Congressional District by 60,000 votes in 1960, his largest plurality for any congressional district in the nation.

Daley to Air His Views

CHICAGO (AP) - Mayor Richard J. Daley will get his chance to show in at least eight cities his view of what happened in demonstrations during the week of the Democratic National Convention.

Another forum was offered Daley by the National Press Club in Washington. However, Allan W. Cromley, president, said Friday the mayor had not replied to an invitation to address the club on either Tuesday or Wednesday.

A statement signed by the mayor and released Thursday by an aide said Daley has accepted the offer of prime time by two broadcasting companies.

A documentary program, prepared by the mayor's office, will be shown on the Metromedia television and radio network, reaching New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Washington and Kansas City.

The Chicago-based WGN Continental Broadcasting Co. also will show the documentary through its outlets in Chicago, Denver and Duluth, Minn. The firm has offered to make the program available to any other station interested in showing it.

WGN announced that five television stations have requested permission to show the film. They are WJXT, Jacksonville, Fla., WSM-TV, Nashville, Tenn., WREX-TV, Rockford, Ill., WBTV, Charlotte, N.C., and WEWS-TV in Cleveland.

A WGN spokesman added that details of the format for the radio time were being worked out by the major's office. The radio presentation will narrate some of the events that will be shown on film during the television documentary.

Time and date of the airing have not been set, the aide said, but will be announced shortly. It was not announced who will narrate the film.

Earlier this week, Daley asked the three major television networks for prime time to present his case to the American people. Daley charged that the networks presented "onesided coverage" of demonstrations and police actions during last week's convention in Chicago.

The Columbia Broadcasting System rejected Daley's request, saying it already had given Daley a chance to present hisview in a 30-minute interview during the convention.

Republican Headquarters to Open Saturday

The Scott County Republican party will open its headquarters at 226 East Center St. Saturday with Vernon Landgraf, Cape Girardeau, candidate for Congress, 10th district, as guest of honor, from 2:30 to 5:30 p.m.

County candidates, Norman Woods, candidate for state representative; Margaret Scott; candidate for prosecuting attorney; Wesley Harris, for sheriff and Bob Jenkins, for public administrator, will be present.

A dinner for Tom Curtis, candidate for United States senate, is planned for Sept. 26.

Lynn A. Colley is headquarters chairman.

Some Say Half U.S. Troops Could Leave Without Losing War

SAIGON (AP) — How soon can the half million American troops in Vietnam begin turning the burden of the war over to the Vietnamese military and start going home?

The prevailing Saigon viewpoint sees this goal realized only years from now unless a settlement is negotiated. The arming of the Vietnamese with more than 200,000 M16 automatic rifles, half of them already delivered, is seen as the initial phase of a long rebuilding process.

And yet because of the peculiar way the Vietnam war is being fought, particularly the general acceptance that military victory in the classical sense is unreachable because of the war's "limits," there is another viewpoint that suggests American boys can start moving out right now without any appreciable military injury.

Just as another quarter of a million American troops brought into Vietnam would not necessarily win the war, many believe the converse applies: A quarter of a million troops pulled out would not necessarily lose it.

Civilian and military viewpoints on the prospects do not necessarily coincide, but the view that American force levels could and should be reduced has already been placed in circulation in the top government levels in Washington, according to senior Americans here. Its proponents see the war's costs — about $30 billion this year—as the major irritant within the United States over Vietnam.

Some Americans here believe that a phased reduction of U.S. troops could begin immediately, paring the number to 200,000 by 1972. One of the proponents is John P. Vann, an influential and knowledgeable regional director of the U.S.-backed pacification program.

Vann would cut deeply into the elaborate military structure built by the former commander of U.S. troops and now chief of staff of the Army, Gen. William C. Westmoreland.

The U.S. high command jealously guards its establishment in Vietnam. Vann admits his proposal is provocative—"It would need a hard-headed secretary of defense to push it through."

Senior U.S. field commanders are against pulling out any American troops in the foreseeable future. Lt. Gen. Richard G. Stilwell, commander of the area that includes the battle-scarred demilitarized zone, comments: "No troop commander will ever admit he has too many trigger pullers." Certainly it is a tenet among commanders that they need as much manpower as is necessary to accomplish the missions assigned them.

The commanders argue that under the ceiling of 550,000 U.S. troops for Vietnam imposed on the military, an "economy of forces" strategy is already being practiced in most of the country. This is the minimum deployment of forces in one area to permit the maximum deployment in another.

Only around Saigon itself and in the two northernmost provinces are there enough forces to amply meet maximum enemy pressure. Elsewhere the allies react to enemy thrusts by rapidly massing the limited forces available.

American efforts in Vietnam presumably are based on the assumption that Vietnamese will eventually take over the defense burden, but critics see the opposite taking place in some areas. Around Saigon, for example, the continuous threat of a major enemy attack has tempted the U.S. command to insist upon a greater voice in security than is normally the case.

"We could nursemaid the Vietnamese army forever," one civilian official commented.

Several factors are seen as possibly speeding up the time for a partial American withdrawal.

One is improved weaponry in the Vietnamese army. All 158 maneuver battalions in the regular forces have received the M16 automatic rifle with chrome-plated chambers and strengthened recoil buffers to prevent jamming. Local militia forces have started getting the M16, giving them equal if not better firepower than the Viet Cong for the first time since 1964.

The U.S. commander in Vietnam, Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, is "showing considerably less patience for high-level excuses than did Westy," according to one official close to him. Abrams believes that real progress in Vietnam can be made only by the Vietnamese, and has told them so. Vietnamese "officers know that the honeymoon with the U.S. is over —they must fish or cut bait," said one official.

To avert what might turn out to be a complete rejection of the war by the U.S. public, Vann said, a planned reduction of U.S. forces would be a necessity. "We have to show them that this thing can end," he said.

He would go about the reduction by partly dismantling the elaborate military structure erected by Gen. Westmoreland.

"The first 100,000 Americans to leave would be for free," Vann declared. "They are the clerks, the laundrymen, the engineer battalions building officers' clubs throughout the country. So many extraneous things are soaking up people not essential."

In Vann's view, infantry divisions should be limited to one base camp each instead of several (the 1st Division has five base camps.) Each base camp generally requires one battalion of infantrymen to secure, meaning that as much as one third of the trigger-pullers in each of the 11 American infantry divisions are standing guard duty.

Restricted to one base camp, U.S. troops would be required to stay out in the field longer, and walk more, particularly if fewer helicopters were used, another Vann recommendation to save the taxpayers money.

In the 3rd Corps area there are 900 helicopters, each using 3,600 pounds of fuel per day. Others who agree with Vann's viewpoint believe that vast quantities of ammunition are used unnecessarily, particularly in the "searching by fire" tactic wherein a unit moves into an area spraying gunfire in front of it. There are also critics of the constant B52 raids that rattle cities every night. "Those raids cost half a million dollars apiece," one official commented. "I know of at least half a dozen raids where an infantry squad would have been better advised to check out the area— at one thousandth of the cost."

Critics of the cost of the war divide annual expenditures this way: $800,000 U.S. economic aid; $1.8 billion military aid to the Vietnamese army, $2.6 billion in direct support of Vietnamese operations such as naval blockades and air support. The U.S. effort costs an additional $25 billion.

"Our real costs," said one high-level critic "are the 11 U.S. divisions and telling them that the sky is the limit moneywise. If some brigade commander decides to plow the country, we will ship out the equipment. Defoliate the highlands, we'll send the chemicals over. What commander has not told you he would rather spend a million dollars on bombs to stop an enemy force rather than risk one American life? I hate to say it but in Vietnam now that money has become as important as that one life."

Those here who see a U.S. planned withdrawal as possible say they have no intention of selling out the Vietnamese. "I think that taking over the burden of the war is within their capability," Vann said. "Things are looking up, not enough but some. But as we phased out our troops, at some time we might have to make a value judgment, particularly if the other side was benefiting from our withdrawal."

Some Vietnamese units have already taken over from Americans.

The four-craft swiftboat unit at Phuoc Quoc Island is now all Vietnamese. The Vietnamese navy has taken over responsibility for manning eight coastal patrol stations.

Vietnamese minesweepers clear the important Dong Nga River each day. The Vietnamese air force now has a squadron of UH1B (Huey) helicopters, and a squadron of Vietnamese F5 Freedom Fighter jets has flown 5,000 combat missions in the past year.

Vietnamese also are taking over an increasing number of Special Forces camps in the highlands, and the Vietnamese army is moving into some places, such as the Bong Son Plain, that American divisions once policed.

Severe Weather Watch Formed for Sikeston

Twenty four persons joined a severe weather watch system network to protect the Sikeston area at a meeting of the Bootheel Citizen Band Radio club Thursday night at the Security National Bank.

By sighting a tornado 15 or more minutes before it strikes lives can be saved, Joseph A. Wunderlich, Poplar Bluff, curl defense captain, said. Even five minutes warning in an emergency can mean the difference between life and death. If a storm is reported all residents should tune-in to the local radio stations. Both Sikeston stations are equipped for early weather warning.

A system of SWWS networks in being organized for Southeast Missouri by Wunderlich.He was the principal speaker last night.

Networks have been organized in Poplar Bluff, Dexter, Campbell, Greenville and New Madrid, Another is being organized in Kennett. Others are planned for Bloomfield, Marble Hill, Jacs Jackson, Cape Girardeau, Benton, Charleston, and Caruthersville.

All volunteer weather observers in the community watch program, will be trained in observation and reporting of thunderstorms, tornadoes, funnel sightings, hail and high winds.

The training will be conducted through coordinated efforts of the commander of the individual network and Wunderlich with the use of weather bureau bulletins and pamphlets.

Farmers, service station operators, delivery men or anyone who normally works outside and has access to a two-way radio may be members of the network. City, and county law enforcement officers, civil defense agencies also will assist as volunteer observers.

Each network of the system appoints a commander and sets up an emergency operation center with appointed monitoring stations. The commander will be responsible upon receiving a report of unusual weather conditions from an observer to call the weather bureau in St. Louis reporting the condition sighted. Local radio stations will be among the first persons called by the commander to warn residents of the danger and advise them of safety precautions.

Wunderlich suggested a system of siren warnings should be employed here so residents will be better prepared.

All commanders will assist other towns in setting up a weather watch system and assist in post disaster relief programs.

Wunderlich explained that the systems are being organized throughout the state. Tornadoes usually travel from the southwest to the northeast. About 70 per cent of tornadoes occur in the midwest from March through June.

Tornado weather is hot humid days with southerly winds, and dark heavy clouds normally moving in from the southwest. Funnel-shaped clouds exending down to the earth from the base of a thundercloud indicates the forming of a tornado. If one is observed, call the local radio stations, Wunderlich said.

Don Allen, Sikeston, president of the Bootheel CB Club, or Dick Mays, Sikeston, may be contacted by anyone interested in joining the network for the Sikeston area.

Cong Battalion Uses Human Shields to Break U.S. Cordon

SAIGON (AP) — A veteran Viet Cong battalion, herding women and children in front as human shields smashed into a company of American paratroopers in three waves early today. Thirty-one Americans were killed and 27 wounded.

The waves of troops from the Viet Cong's Cu Chi Regiment broke through a company from the U.S. 101st Airborne Division 26 miles northwest of Saigon. The Viet Cong and the paratroopers were still locked in battle as night fell.

Thirty-one Viet Cong have been reported killed so far.

AP photographer Max Nash reported from the battlefield that many of the Americans were killed by the Viet Cong as they lay wounded on the field.

The battle was one of three fought northwest and southwest of Saigon today in which, according to incomplete reports, at least 110 of the enemy were killed and 150 persons seized as suspected Viet Cong.

A Communist defector had told U.S. intelligence officers that Viet Cong troops were meeting Thursday in the village of Ap Trang Dau, nine miles from a major allied military base housing the headquarters of the U.S. 25th Infantry Division and a South Vietnamese training base for rangers.

Troops from the 25th Division put a cordon around the village, and the Viet Cong tried unsuccessfully three times to break out.

Suddenly, Nash reported, about 300 enemy troops charged through rice paddies into one American paratroop company 150 yards away. The came in three waves. At command headquarters in Cu Chi, the voice of a radio operator came through: "They are coming, they are coming." Then the radio went dead.

U.S. officers said the first wave of enemy troops came running shoulder-to-shoulder through the night, screaming, firing assault rifles and pushing women and children in front of them as human shields.

After breaking the cordon, the enemy vanished into the darkness, leaving 31 of their own dead on the battlefield. Nash said some of the third wave enemy troops had bamboo poles with them to carry off some of their dead.

Six Injured in Three Collisions

Seven were injured in three highway accidents Thursday, the state patrol reported.

In a two car collision on the Johnson Island road, south of highway 25 near Kennett, at 4:15 p.m., a 1956 Ford, driven by J.D. Easley, 16, Kennett, failed to stop at an intersection, and was struck in the left side by a 1968 Ford, driven by Joann Wells, 39, Kennett, the patrol said.

Easley received a fractured skull and bruises to his face. The Wells woman received a bruised right knee, and cuts on her neck.

Both were taken to Dunklin County Memorial hospital in Kennett.

Three were injured at 6:10 p.m., on a country road, near Biehle in Perry county.

A 1960 Ford, driven by Fay Rose Kutz, 18, Perryville, and a 1966 Dodge, driven by Melvin Ranaud, 31, Perryville, met headon on a crest of a hill on the gravel road.

Miss Kutz received a broken nose. She was taken to Perry County Memorial hospital, in Perryville.

Ranaud received bruises on his head and chest injuries; and a passenger, Rhonda Sue Ranaud, three, received bruises on her body and face. Both were treated by a Perryville physician.

Emanuel Lee Reeger, 72, Chaffee, driver of a 1963 Buick, was injured at 9:55 a.m., on highway 25, one mile north of Advance.

Reeger was northbound on highway 25, when a 1955 Chevrolet, driven by Arthur D. Dalton, 58, Advance, pulled from a side road into the path of his car.

Reeger received cuts on his right ear, and a bruised left arm and hand. He was taken to Southeast Missouri hospital in Cape Girardeau.

Dalton was given a summons, the patrol said, for failure to yield right-of-way, and for not having an operator's license.

Fall, Bite, Sting, Ball Bat Injure

Four were admitted to the emergency room of the Missouri Delta Community hospital Thursday:

Bill L. Smith, Lilbourn, fell through a glass door at home, cutting right forearm; Richard J. St. Mary, New Madrid, bitten by spider on right side of back; Robert Turnage, Oran, stung by wasp on back of head and Gary J. Towel, Morehouse, hit in head with ball bat.

Skunk Attacks Man in Alley

A skunk lurking in the alley behind the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. on Center St., tried to bite a man leaving the office at about 10 p.m. Thursday.

Jim Tolson, Cape Girardeau, an employe of the company working here, reported the incident to police. He said the skunk attacked him, but did not bite. He called police, because he thought the skunk might have rabies.

Grocery Manager Robbed

FLAT RIVER, Mo. (AP)-A man armed with a pistol robbed a Flat River grocery manager of $8,300 today and then locked the victim in the trunk of his car.

Local officers and a Missouri Highway Patrol airplane joined in search for the robber who drove off with another man.

The manager of the Federal IGA store, Donald Straus, had just stepped out of his automobile when he was met by the robber. Straus was carrying the money in a bank sack which he said was for use in the store's operation today.

The robber told Straus:

"I'm nervous, don't make me do what I don't want to do."

He took the sack and locked the manager in the truck of his car. Straus was released by workmen unloading a grocery truck who reported they saw a car with two men speed out of the parking lot.

Glen Franklin Clark, Sikeston, and Robert Shannon, 105 Alabama. Each was charge with public intoxication.

Nixon to Visit Springfield

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) - Republican presidential nominee Richard M. Nixon will arrive about noon Sept. 19 by air for a campaign rally at Municipal Airport in Springfield.

The announcement was made today by Rep. Durward G. Hall, R-Mo., and by Gene Taylor of Sarcoxie, Republican national committeeman.

The Nixon visit is scheduled to last about an hour and will come after an earlier appearance that day in Salt Lake City. He will leave from here for an afternoon stop in Peoria, Ill., and is scheduled for an evening telecast that night from New York City.

In the announcement Hall commented on Nixon's stop that "I think we can assure him of a real old-fashioned Ozark welcome, not unlike the one he received during the 1960 campaign."

Nixon carried Missouri's 7th Congressional District by 60,000 votes in 1960, his largest plurality for any congressional district in the nation.

Daley to Air His Views

CHICAGO (AP) - Mayor Richard J. Daley will get his chance to show in at least eight cities his view of what happened in demonstrations during the week of the Democratic National Convention.

Another forum was offered Daley by the National Press Club in Washington. However, Allan W. Cromley, president, said Friday the mayor had not replied to an invitation to address the club on either Tuesday or Wednesday.

A statement signed by the mayor and released Thursday by an aide said Daley has accepted the offer of prime time by two broadcasting companies.

A documentary program, prepared by the mayor's office, will be shown on the Metromedia television and radio network, reaching New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Washington and Kansas City.

The Chicago-based WGN Continental Broadcasting Co. also will show the documentary through its outlets in Chicago, Denver and Duluth, Minn. The firm has offered to make the program available to any other station interested in showing it.

WGN announced that five television stations have requested permission to show the film. They are WJXT, Jacksonville, Fla., WSM-TV, Nashville, Tenn., WREX-TV, Rockford, Ill., WBTV, Charlotte, N.C., and WEWS-TV in Cleveland.

A WGN spokesman added that details of the format for the radio time were being worked out by the major's office. The radio presentation will narrate some of the events that will be shown on film during the television documentary.

Time and date of the airing have not been set, the aide said, but will be announced shortly. It was not announced who will narrate the film.

Earlier this week, Daley asked the three major television networks for prime time to present his case to the American people. Daley charged that the networks presented "onesided coverage" of demonstrations and police actions during last week's convention in Chicago.

The Columbia Broadcasting System rejected Daley's request, saying it already had given Daley a chance to present hisview in a 30-minute interview during the convention.

Republican Headquarters to Open Saturday

The Scott County Republican party will open its headquarters at 226 East Center St. Saturday with Vernon Landgraf, Cape Girardeau, candidate for Congress, 10th district, as guest of honor, from 2:30 to 5:30 p.m.

County candidates, Norman Woods, candidate for state representative; Margaret Scott; candidate for prosecuting attorney; Wesley Harris, for sheriff and Bob Jenkins, for public administrator, will be present.

A dinner for Tom Curtis, candidate for United States senate, is planned for Sept. 26.

Lynn A. Colley is headquarters chairman.

Some Say Half U.S. Troops Could Leave Without Losing War

SAIGON (AP) — How soon can the half million American troops in Vietnam begin turning the burden of the war over to the Vietnamese military and start going home?

The prevailing Saigon viewpoint sees this goal realized only years from now unless a settlement is negotiated. The arming of the Vietnamese with more than 200,000 M16 automatic rifles, half of them already delivered, is seen as the initial phase of a long rebuilding process.

And yet because of the peculiar way the Vietnam war is being fought, particularly the general acceptance that military victory in the classical sense is unreachable because of the war's "limits," there is another viewpoint that suggests American boys can start moving out right now without any appreciable military injury.

Just as another quarter of a million American troops brought into Vietnam would not necessarily win the war, many believe the converse applies: A quarter of a million troops pulled out would not necessarily lose it.

Civilian and military viewpoints on the prospects do not necessarily coincide, but the view that American force levels could and should be reduced has already been placed in circulation in the top government levels in Washington, according to senior Americans here. Its proponents see the war's costs — about $30 billion this year—as the major irritant within the United States over Vietnam.

Some Americans here believe that a phased reduction of U.S. troops could begin immediately, paring the number to 200,000 by 1972. One of the proponents is John P. Vann, an influential and knowledgeable regional director of the U.S.-backed pacification program.

Vann would cut deeply into the elaborate military structure built by the former commander of U.S. troops and now chief of staff of the Army, Gen. William C. Westmoreland.

The U.S. high command jealously guards its establishment in Vietnam. Vann admits his proposal is provocative—"It would need a hard-headed secretary of defense to push it through."

Senior U.S. field commanders are against pulling out any American troops in the foreseeable future. Lt. Gen. Richard G. Stilwell, commander of the area that includes the battle-scarred demilitarized zone, comments: "No troop commander will ever admit he has too many trigger pullers." Certainly it is a tenet among commanders that they need as much manpower as is necessary to accomplish the missions assigned them.

The commanders argue that under the ceiling of 550,000 U.S. troops for Vietnam imposed on the military, an "economy of forces" strategy is already being practiced in most of the country. This is the minimum deployment of forces in one area to permit the maximum deployment in another.

Only around Saigon itself and in the two northernmost provinces are there enough forces to amply meet maximum enemy pressure. Elsewhere the allies react to enemy thrusts by rapidly massing the limited forces available.

American efforts in Vietnam presumably are based on the assumption that Vietnamese will eventually take over the defense burden, but critics see the opposite taking place in some areas. Around Saigon, for example, the continuous threat of a major enemy attack has tempted the U.S. command to insist upon a greater voice in security than is normally the case.

"We could nursemaid the Vietnamese army forever," one civilian official commented.

Several factors are seen as possibly speeding up the time for a partial American withdrawal.

One is improved weaponry in the Vietnamese army. All 158 maneuver battalions in the regular forces have received the M16 automatic rifle with chrome-plated chambers and strengthened recoil buffers to prevent jamming. Local militia forces have started getting the M16, giving them equal if not better firepower than the Viet Cong for the first time since 1964.

The U.S. commander in Vietnam, Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, is "showing considerably less patience for high-level excuses than did Westy," according to one official close to him. Abrams believes that real progress in Vietnam can be made only by the Vietnamese, and has told them so. Vietnamese "officers know that the honeymoon with the U.S. is over —they must fish or cut bait," said one official.

To avert what might turn out to be a complete rejection of the war by the U.S. public, Vann said, a planned reduction of U.S. forces would be a necessity. "We have to show them that this thing can end," he said.

He would go about the reduction by partly dismantling the elaborate military structure erected by Gen. Westmoreland.

"The first 100,000 Americans to leave would be for free," Vann declared. "They are the clerks, the laundrymen, the engineer battalions building officers' clubs throughout the country. So many extraneous things are soaking up people not essential."

In Vann's view, infantry divisions should be limited to one base camp each instead of several (the 1st Division has five base camps.) Each base camp generally requires one battalion of infantrymen to secure, meaning that as much as one third of the trigger-pullers in each of the 11 American infantry divisions are standing guard duty.

Restricted to one base camp, U.S. troops would be required to stay out in the field longer, and walk more, particularly if fewer helicopters were used, another Vann recommendation to save the taxpayers money.

In the 3rd Corps area there are 900 helicopters, each using 3,600 pounds of fuel per day. Others who agree with Vann's viewpoint believe that vast quantities of ammunition are used unnecessarily, particularly in the "searching by fire" tactic wherein a unit moves into an area spraying gunfire in front of it. There are also critics of the constant B52 raids that rattle cities every night. "Those raids cost half a million dollars apiece," one official commented. "I know of at least half a dozen raids where an infantry squad would have been better advised to check out the area— at one thousandth of the cost."

Critics of the cost of the war divide annual expenditures this way: $800,000 U.S. economic aid; $1.8 billion military aid to the Vietnamese army, $2.6 billion in direct support of Vietnamese operations such as naval blockades and air support. The U.S. effort costs an additional $25 billion.

"Our real costs," said one high-level critic "are the 11 U.S. divisions and telling them that the sky is the limit moneywise. If some brigade commander decides to plow the country, we will ship out the equipment. Defoliate the highlands, we'll send the chemicals over. What commander has not told you he would rather spend a million dollars on bombs to stop an enemy force rather than risk one American life? I hate to say it but in Vietnam now that money has become as important as that one life."

Those here who see a U.S. planned withdrawal as possible say they have no intention of selling out the Vietnamese. "I think that taking over the burden of the war is within their capability," Vann said. "Things are looking up, not enough but some. But as we phased out our troops, at some time we might have to make a value judgment, particularly if the other side was benefiting from our withdrawal."

Some Vietnamese units have already taken over from Americans.

The four-craft swiftboat unit at Phuoc Quoc Island is now all Vietnamese. The Vietnamese navy has taken over responsibility for manning eight coastal patrol stations.

Vietnamese minesweepers clear the important Dong Nga River each day. The Vietnamese air force now has a squadron of UH1B (Huey) helicopters, and a squadron of Vietnamese F5 Freedom Fighter jets has flown 5,000 combat missions in the past year.

Vietnamese also are taking over an increasing number of Special Forces camps in the highlands, and the Vietnamese army is moving into some places, such as the Bong Son Plain, that American divisions once policed.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS:
THE JOHN F. KENNEDY

The John F. Kennedy, a 61,450-train aircraft carrier, will be commissioned at Newport News, Va., on Saturday (Sept. 7).

Think of a ship as long as the Empire State Building is tall. Think of a flight deck that would have room enough for 68 tennis courts or four football fields.

Think of a floating city. A ship that houses a chapel, a bakery, complete dental and medical facilities, electrical generating stations, saltwater evaporators to convert brine into portable water for drinking and for the ship's four steam catapults, a laundry, a well-stocked library, TV lounges, radio and television broadcast studios, a motion picture theatre, a post office, and three ladies's powder rooms.

The latest in luxury liners, Hardly: the description fits the John F. Kennedy, the huge aircraft carrier which is being commissioned at a pier at the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company in Virginia on Saturday.

CVA-67, as the ship was designated on the drawing boards, may be the last of the big carriers to have conventional power. In his press conference of Oct. 31, 1963, President Kennedy said: "As you suggest, there is no use having a nuclear carrier unless we have the ships to accompany it -- and after all, there is a large train with a carrier -- unless they have nuclear power . . . If you add up the other ships that might have to accompany it, it gets into a large sum."

The argument to the contrary is equally impressive. Capt. Raymond E. Peet, commanding the nuclear frigate Bainbridge, wrote several years ago: "In port our ships are vulnerable; electronic equipments are difficult to maintain in a ready conditioned. Nuclear-powered ships can ramain at sea for indefinite periods and truly fulfill the Navy's claim of a mobile, long-enduring, and versatile defense unit away from home."

The John F. Kennedy will be the largest carrier of the Forrestal class. It is the second ship to be named for a member of the Kennedy family. The other Kennedy vessel is the destroyer Joseph P. Kennedy, named for the late President's brother, who was killed in 1944 during a World War II air mission.

Jack Kennedy once wrote in a foreword to a book on the U.S.S. Constitution' "My earliest memories of the United States Navy go back to the days when, as a small boy, I used to be taken to the U.S.S. Constitution in Charlestown, Mass. The sight of that historic frigate, with its tall spars and black guns, stirred my imagination and made history come alive for me."

John F. Kennedy as a naval officer and as commander-in-chief, understood the sea. He knew well its importance and the importance of ships in the maintenance of a strong defense posture. He told a group of officers and men on June 6, 1963: "Just as Admiral Mahan said more than 50 years ago, any country which wishes to protect its security and the security of those allied with it must maintain its position on the sea. And if there is any lesson of the 20th century, and especially of the past few years, it is that in spite of the advances in space and in the air, strategic air, this country must still move easily and safely across the seas of the world."

"The sea is a friend and an enemy," Jack Kennedy once said. It is appropriate that 10-year-old Caroline Kennedy, the sponsor, on May 27, 1967 smashed a bottle of champagne across the bow of the John F. Kennedy to christen the ship.

THROTTLEBOTTOM NO MORE

In normal circumstances, nominations will be made for the Republican candidacy for Vice President on Thursday (Aug. 8).

ALEXANDER THROTTLEBOTTOM, in the musical Of Three I Sing, had been nominated by the simple process of putting a number of names on slips in a hat and pulling one out. Throttlebottom didn't win; he lost -- that is, is had his name drawn.

The first Vice President, John Adams, called his job "the most insignificant office that ever the invention of man contrived." Some Vice Presidents of the 19th century, nominated for geography rather than talent, were so obscure that their names are remembered today only by cross-word puzzle nuts.

The vice presidential nominee usually "balances" the ticket geographically. Thus Warren of California ran with Dewey of New York in 1948, Bricker of Ohio with Dewey in 1944, Nixon of California with Eisenhower -- adopted by the Eastern Establishment -- in 1952 and 1956, John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson in 1960.

OFTEN THE VICE PRESIDENTIAL NOMINATION goes as reward for help toward the presidential nomination -- Garner with F. D. Roosevelt in 1932. But often it represents an attempt to heal a breach or to reconcile antagonistic elements -- Bricker, a Taft leader, with Dewey in 1944; Robinson, Southern Dry, with Smith, Tammany West, in 1928.

In recent years the nominee for President has expressed his choice for the V.P. candidacy and the convention has approved. Gen. Eisenhower and a group of his close advisers in 1952, for example, agreed on Sen. Richard M. Nixon (Calif.) for the No. 2 spot on the ticket and the convention quickly confirmed their choice. Similarly, the 1960 conventions quickly accepted the designations by the respective nominees of Lyndon B. Johnson and Henry Cabot Lodge for the vice presidency.

But as recently as 1956 the Democrats fought over the Veep nomination after the presidential nominee, Adlai E. Stevenson, declared a hands-off policy in the contest for his running mate. Sen. Estes Kefauver (Tenn.) was nominated on the second ballot after a close race with Sen. John F. Kennecy (Mass.).

THE MODERN RESURRECTION of the vice presidential office from obsecurity, if not impotence, had faint beginnings in Woodrow Wilson's second term. While the President was at the Paris Peace Conference, he authorized Vice President Thomas R. Marshall to preside over Cabinet meetings.

Calvin Coolidge said he had been immeasurably helped in the Presidency by having sat in on some sessions of President Hardin's Cabinet. However, Hoover's advisers in 1928 dropped the Coolidge co-pilot, Vice President Charles G. Dawes. Loius Clinton Hatch has observed: "President Coolidge is said never to have forgiven him (Dawes) for his absence from the Senate when his casting vote might have saved the nomination of Charles B. Warren as Attorney General from defeat."

President Eisenhower on March 8, 1957, told the press that Vice President Nixon was "one of the comers in the Republican party . . . young, vigorous, healthy and certainly deeply informed." Yet on Aug. 24, 1960, asked what Nixon had contributed to decision-making, Ike said: "If you give me a week, I might think of one."

Martin Van Buren was the last Vice President (so far) to become President except through the death of the Chief Executive. But eight times the Vice President has become President. Today the nomination for Vice President of either party would scarcely be considered beneath any worthy man. Throttlebottom, who mournfully wanted to go to his "slick" home town, Topeka, is only a memory.

The sock of the Kremlin bloc countries' invasion of Czechoslovakia isn't what it was 20 years ago. It does reveal that the essential nature of Communism as an unyielding, unreasonable, bloody, dishonest, dictatorial, rigid and inflexible force is essentially unchanged.

It was a cat and a mouse game that the Russians played on Czechoslovakia, culminating with the unexpected and brutal invasion of the unhappy country.

It is obvious that Russian Communism permits no slight deviation from the party line and that even the smallest freedoms will not be tolerated.

Russia cannot be trusted by friend or foe alike. No one was more surprised by the invasion than the leaders of Czechoslovakia, who had just gone through the window dressing routine of receiving leaders of Soviet bloc countries in a series of state visits.

The negotiations were merely a deceptive implication that Russia would be content to work out an accomodation over the table instead of at gunpoint.

Those who believed that Czechoslovakia's immediate troubles were over after the visits didn't reckon with the desperation and insecurity of the Kremlin rulers.

Even though a small breath of freedom has been savagely cut in Czechoslovakia, the United States must continue to try to work wherever possible with Russia to keep the peace of the world.

The threat of nuclear war makes this essential.

President Lyndon B. Johnson's offer to go to Russia after the invasion are ill advised and poorly timed.

This is a time when Russia's hand should not be strengthened voluntarily by the United States.

A presidential visit to Russia now would be playing a propaganda game directly into the hands of the Soviet Union.

The message that all countries under Russian domination including Czechoslovakia, would get from the visit would be that as far as the United States is concerned all is forgiven.

All isn't forgiven but there is little that the United States can do to help the liberty loving Czechs now except to give them vocal support and avoid fraternizing or knuckling down to the Russians.

Hal Boyle

NEWYORK (AP) — Sidewalk comments of a Pavement Plato:

Are we flooding our schools with the wrong people?

We are sending our kids there. Might it not be better if the grownups went?

This month some 57 million young people will inundate U.S. kindergartens, classrooms and campuses. Many of them profess a reluctance, since it is "the thing" to do.

"Gee, vacation is so much fun I hate to think of going back to school," said my daughter, Tracy, who is 15 and is secretly rather proud that she'll be a high school sophomore.

"I wish I could go in your place," I told her.

"You must be kidding," she said, unbelieving.

But I wasn't kidding at all. Millions of middle-aged Americans, I am sure, have a wishful yearning to return for a refresher course in the groves of academe.

George Bernard Shaw once said it was too bad youth had to be wasted on the young. The same thing might be said about education.

"Civilization is a race between education and catastrophe," once observed H. G. Wells. This remark is often ridiculed now by our precocious youth as just another pompous platitude from one of yesterday's fuddy-duddies.

But many grown ups have a feeling of desperation that their own education is hardly sufficient to avert the catastrophe.

The sheepskin they won years ago, if they did win one, has hardly proved a passport to safety. They have merely, at the best, staved off catastrophe. Once they, too, were "the hope of tomorrow," but today a younger generation bitterly blames them for the pickle the world finds itself in.

They survived a terrible business depression, two great world wars and innumerable smaller conflicts. Yet civilization, dwelling uneasily under the Damocletian sword of atomic extermination, seems in greater danger than ever.

The average middle-aged man doesn't feel educated. He feels woefully ignorant. He hasn't had much time to campaign for a better world. He has been too busy earning a living, keeping his kids out of jail, and paying off mortgages.

Now, with many of the best years of his life behind him, he suddenly finds himself something of a stranger in the world he lives in. Knowledge has passed him by. Incessant change has riddled many of his firmest beliefs, raised doubts even as to the verity of his God.

"I'm darned if I really know what I am sure about," said one such man. "Everything I learned in school seems to be out-of-date or wrong. I'd give anything to go back to school and start getting educated all over again."

Certainly, if given the chance, most middle-aged men wouldn't waste the opportunity. Perhaps it would be a good idea if every high school graduate, before going on to college, were forced to spend a year in the School of Hard Knocks, and his father given a sabbatical 12-month in a university discovering what the New Knowledge is all about.

It would be a real education experience for both son and dad, and at the end of it there would be less nonsense about "the generation gap" that yawns between them. Each would be wiser and understand the other better.

Isn't it worth a trial? There would be no lack of middle-aged volunteers.

She had just finished her shower when the doorbell rang. Tiptoeing to the front door, shivering in plump, pink nudity, she called, "Who is it?"

"The blind man," came a mournful voice, so she shrugged and opened the door with one hand while reaching for her purse with the other. When she turned to face the man, he was grinning from ear to ear, and she saw that he was holding a large package in his arms.

"You can see!" she exclaimed.

"Yeah," he nodded happily. "And mighty pretty, too. Now, where do you want I should put these blinds?"

"My sex drive," said the old man. "It's too high, and I'd like to have you lower it if you can."

"Lower it?!" exclaimed the doctor, still unable to believe what the 90-year-old gentleman was saying. "Just what do you consider 'high'?"

"These days it seems like it's all in my head, Doc," said the old man, "and I'd like to have you lower it if you can."

THOSE TASTY LEFT-OVERS

THE YOUNG PASTOR was over-joyed with a new calling and wanted to make sure that he made the proper impression with his first sermon before the new congregation.

Everything was in its proper place as he stepped into the pulpit. "It says in the Good Book that Jesus fed the Multitued with 5,000 loaves of bread and 2,000 fish. Is there one among you who could do likewise?"

An elderly deacon, sitting in the front row, nodded his head up and down. After the service the pastor asked the deacon how he could do such a thing. The deacon pointed out the pastor's error in the famous numbers which ruined the young man's impression of his day's efforts.

Vowing to make amends, the pastor used the same line a week later only using the correct figures. Still the same front row deacon nodded his head. "How do you think you could have fed the multitude with such little food supply," the minister asked after the service. "I'd use all that was lef over from last week's feed!"

A MATTER OF VIEWPOINT

Former Alabama governor George Wallace is beginning to worry Democrats and Republicans alike the way he is winning friends and influencing voters with his no-nonsense promise to chastize the dissidents and restore respect for law and order in America.

Wallace, it will be remembered, was the man who once literally "stood in the schoolhouse door" to defy the law of the land on the amtter of integration and whose campaign speeches carry the implication that the order of the courts on the same issue will be ignored should he become president.

Law and order. Like beauty, its meaning is in the beholder whose eye is getting poked.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA AND DISARMAMENT

Even as the tanks of the Soviet army rumbled through the streets of Prague, some voices were being raised in the United States to say that what was happening in Czechoslovakia proved all over again the imperative need for the United States to enter into a disarmament pact with Russia. "We do have to talk to the Russians about arms control," proclaimed a writer for one of the largest dailies in the U.s.

The question must arise instantly as to the value of talks about arms control with an avowed enemy which has shown repeatedly that treaties with it are worthless. The advocates of disarmament ask us to believe that Soviet Russia can betray an ally and yet be faithful to us. The communists want a free hand to act with the utmost brutality in Czechoslovakia and other satellite nations at the same time that they seek respect and confidence in the rest of the world.

This is utterly unrealistic. The leaders of world communism are not reasonable, peace-loving men. They started the cold war between Russia and the United States even before the shooting of the hot war stopped in 1945. They sent spies into our country to seek out our military and industrial secrets. They arranged to have our ship, "Pueblo" seized on the high seas and its highly classified electronic equipment transported directly into the Soviet Union. They have carried out a continuing campaign of subversion among any Americans they considered susceptible.

In the face of such facts, it is unbelievable that any American can say the Czechoslovakia tragedy proves the need for disarmament talks between Russia and the U.S. Unbelievable -- but it is being said, just the same. HLH.

Washington - Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON SAY: TV spotlighting of Chicago violence was deliberate; Networks resented expense of Miami-Chicago move; Provocation of police by militants was ignored

WASHINGTON--This is a column which will make a lot of TV executives sore. It may also make some viewers skeptical about the TV coverage of the recent Chicago convention.

We attended both political conventions and witnessed violence in both Miami and Chicago. Outside agitators came to both cities to foment trouble that they hoped would attract the spotlight and tarnish the U.S. image.

Anyone who watched the two conventions on television might think that chicago was exploding with violence while Miami was comparatively peaceful.

Yet in Miami, six persons were killed, and the riot area was put under curfew. In Chicago, sniper fire was reported, but only one policemen was wounded. A bullet also thudded into a bus. The outbreaks never became serious enough to require a curfew.

After the Miami convention we reported that the TV networks, angry over the $3 million it was costing them to pull up their cables and transfer everything to Chicago, intended to retaliate by focusing attention on Democratic "disturbances."

The networks got their revenge, in Chicago they played up the violence which they had virtually ignored in Miami. They complained about tight security restrictions, which, incidentally, had also been imposed by the Republican convention. They sought out the dissidents and featured them while the Democratic orators were expounding.

TELEVISION'S JOB

This raises two important questions about the role of TV at the Democratic convention.

1. Did the TV cameras help incite the violence? There is little doubt that the provocations were planned largely for the benefit of television. We stayed at the Conrad Hilton Hotel, which was the center of most of the trouble. During the disturbances we mingled with the hippies and yippies. We found almost no action outside the circle of the TV Kleig lights. Aside from some shouting and surging, little was happening in the darkness.

2. Did the TV networks make news? There is evidence that the TV networks, perhaps in their eagerness to generate high ratings for TV sponsors, encouraged dissidents to make inflammatory statements and helped to stir up controversies. When the networks sell convention time to cigarette and oil sponsors for several million dollars, they have to keep up the viewing interest. One way of doing this is to pick fights, stimulate excitement, interrupt dull speeches and roll calls. Once, the sound was switched on before the cameras focused on a TV newsman about to interview a prominent Democrat. The interviewer was overheard coaching his subject: "Let's keep this Kennedy story going."

The TV networks also presented an outrageously biased picture of the events in Chicago. They gave the impression, for instance, that the police were beating up innocent young people who had come to Chicago for peaceful demonstrations.

Certainly, the police were too zealous in swinging their billy clubs, and a lot of innocent people were hurt.

HIPPIE HECKLERS

But the TV networks scarcely mentioned the provocations that finally made the police lose their tempers. The hippies shouted obscenities, hurled rocks and bottles, sprayed police with caustic chemicals, damaged police cars and generally defied police orders.

One group tore down the American flag and tried to raise a communist flag in its place. Other agitators waved red flags and North Vietnamese flags. A couple of demonstrators slammed a huge chunk of cement through the window of a police car. Others stoned police cars, tossed cherry bombs and stink bombs, smashed windows, broke into liquor stores.

Jerry Rubin, the yippie leader, cried through a bullhorn for violence against the police, whom he called "pigs." Black panther leaders, taking the stump in Lincoln Park, urged the demonstrators to break up into small groups and go on a rampage through Chicago's loop. Other agitators made speeches that sounded like radio Hanoi and radio Peking.

The same night that police began cracking heads, 70 policemen were also injured. Several officers had to be hospitalized. By the end of the convention week, 118 officers had been hurt.

This was a side of the story that the TV networks largely ignored. They had hundreds of newsmen and cameramen in Chicago who should have been able to get the facts. The two of us, operating alone, easily dug out the full story.

Indeed, we reported in advance what was in store for the Democrats in Chicago. We had studied government intelligence reports which warned that the militants planned a deliberate provocation of the police on the two most important nights of the convention.

We reported that the leaders ranged from communists and anarchists to sincere pacifists. They were directed loosely by the national mobilization committee to end the war in Vietnam. The co-chairmen are Dr. Sidney Morris Peck, a former communist, and David Dellinger, a pacifist who has been to Hanoi and is an apologist for Ho Chi Minh.

We reported on August 25: "The committee has trained a group of militant demonstrators to attempt a 'crash-in' to break into the convention amphitheater. They will be directed by marshals carrying walkie-talkies. Calls have gone out for medics to give first aid to the demonstrators and electronic experts to operate the radio equipment.

This was published three days before the first violence. It all happened exactly on schedule. And the TV networks showed it all exactly as they had threatened.

Inside Labor

GIANTS BATTLE:
Reuther Launches New Civil War Inside Labor

Washington, D. C. -- Walter Reuther, having served his time in Chicago like the rest of us, celebrated his 61st birthday last Sunday by proving that he still was sufficiently young in heart to take a whack at the politics of confrontation.

It was easy. The rusty-haired maverick simply declared war on other labor giants. The struggle could be bloodier than the battles of Lincoln Park. Reuther simply crossed labor's Rubicon by tearing up his nonagression pact with the million-member International Assn. of Machinists (IAM), one of George Meany's favorite unions.

So strongly fraternal towards the IAM is AFL-CIO president Meany, that he hedge-hopped for it it as he never has for any other organization.

Last week Meany waited in Chicago just long enough to get Hubert Humphrey's telephone call early Thursday, Aug. 29, during which the Vice President confided to the cigar-chewing number one union chief that Sen. Ed Muskie would be the vice presidential candidate.

Meany was delighted. He then took a train east. Monday morning, the labor prexy marched with Mr. Humphrey, sat alongside him in the reviewing stand for several hours, and then raced for a plane back to Chicago.

There he spoke at the massive Machinist convention in the Conrad Hilton. For those who know of Meany's distaste for travel, this was a great demonstration of solidarity with Machinists' president Roy Siemiller -- now Walter Reuther's prime target.

On this labor beat you can insult a man tohis face and walk away unbloodied. But you don't raid his territory unless you want open war.

Well, Reuther has begun invading the Machinists' territory. The auto union has joined with the Teamsters in a raid on the Machinists' jurisdiction over the McDonnell Douglas aircraft plant in St. Louis. There are more than 21,000 members at stake. For years the Machinists have had them under contract at the Phantom jet plant there. Now Reuther seeks to dump the Machinists union from this, one of IAM's biggest, most famous installations.

This is civil war. It will spill over into the West Coast aerospace industry where both unions have major contracts. There will be counter raids by the Machinists and their allies.

And Reuther knows these are not flabby allies. Not the least of them is that one-man "stonewall" Paul Hall, the Seafarers' International Union chief. Hall can whip up a storm, orate like an old-style medicine man, argue like a college-bred transportation economist, and swear like an infuriated cleaver-wielding gallery cook. He's used all these techniques on President Johnson, several White House aides, scores of congressmen - and especially on Walter Reuther and Jimmy Hoffa.

Though it has gone unnoticed during the current political heat, it was Paul Hall who pulled the Chicago taxi strike right smack during the Democrats' national convention, though he's one of Mr. Humphrey's most active supporters and heaviest contributors.

That was the strategic moment for Hall's Chicago taxi union to strike. So it did. Paul Hall plays it hard. He's had to. He's been theprime target of the communist underground and the mob's underworld. He fought Hoffa all the way from Puerto Rico to California, and beat him.

Now Hall has replaced Walter Reuther (who was suspended from the AFL-CIO last spring) as chairman of the big federation's national Organizing Committee.

Hall tells me he plans to revamp the Organizing Committee.

"I want to give it a shot in the arm," says Hall," by remodeling it on the style of the Committee On Political Education (COPE.) This means that we must involve in our new drives everybody in the federation. And all the unions too. And their officers, just the same as we go down to the firing-line on politics. Reuther made this committee one of the AFL-CIO's most dormant bodies. Since 1965, he turned in only one report. But now we'll getit moving."

Hall always says what he means. He's one of the strong men in Meany's inner circle. It may take a few months, but the counter drive will start. It may take the form of raids on Reuther's territory. It may be a campaign into new fields. Whatever the strategy, the tactic will be to hem in Reuther, the auto workers, and the Teamsters if necessary.

This makes it the battle of the giants. Insiders know that it can get bloody as organizing squads move against each other.

We'll know better during the week of Sept. 16 where all this feuding is heading. On that Monday the AFL-CIO high command gathers in New York City for its late summer session.

The decision must be made whether to hold off or to haul-off at Reuther during the presidential campaign.

Obviously Reuther has moved on the theory that the AFL-CIO is so heavily committed to Hubert Humphrey's drive that the federation will not be able to spare time, money or energy while he swoops in. He may be right. But the campaign is over on the night of Nov. 5.

After that it will be a long hot winter on the labor front.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS:
THE JOHN F. KENNEDY

The John F. Kennedy, a 61,450-train aircraft carrier, will be commissioned at Newport News, Va., on Saturday (Sept. 7).

Think of a ship as long as the Empire State Building is tall. Think of a flight deck that would have room enough for 68 tennis courts or four football fields.

Think of a floating city. A ship that houses a chapel, a bakery, complete dental and medical facilities, electrical generating stations, saltwater evaporators to convert brine into portable water for drinking and for the ship's four steam catapults, a laundry, a well-stocked library, TV lounges, radio and television broadcast studios, a motion picture theatre, a post office, and three ladies's powder rooms.

The latest in luxury liners, Hardly: the description fits the John F. Kennedy, the huge aircraft carrier which is being commissioned at a pier at the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company in Virginia on Saturday.

CVA-67, as the ship was designated on the drawing boards, may be the last of the big carriers to have conventional power. In his press conference of Oct. 31, 1963, President Kennedy said: "As you suggest, there is no use having a nuclear carrier unless we have the ships to accompany it -- and after all, there is a large train with a carrier -- unless they have nuclear power ... If you add up the other ships that might have to accompany it, it gets into a large sum."

The argument to the contrary is equally impressive. Capt. Raymond E. Peet, commanding the nuclear frigate Bainbridge, wrote several years ago: "In port our ships are vulnerable; electronic equipments are difficult to maintain in a ready conditioned. Nuclear-powered ships can ramain at sea for indefinite periods and truly fulfill the Navy's claim of a mobile, long-enduring, and versatile defense unit away from home."

The John F. Kennedy will be the largest carrier of the Forrestal class. It is the second ship to be named for a member of the Kennedy family. The other Kennedy vessel is the destroyer Joseph P. Kennedy, named for the late President's brother, who was killed in 1944 during a World War II air mission.

Jack Kennedy once wrote in a foreword to a book on the U.S.S. Constitution' "My earliest memories of the United States Navy go back to the days when, as a small boy, I used to be taken to the U.S.S. Constitution in Charlestown, Mass. The sight of that historic frigate, with its tall spars and black guns, stirred my imagination and made history come alive for me."

John F. Kennedy as a naval officer and as commander-in-chief, understood the sea. He knew well its importance and the importance of ships in the maintenance of a strong defense posture. He told a group of officers and men on June 6, 1963: "Just as Admiral Mahan said more than 50 years ago, any country which wishes to protect its security and the security of those allied with it must maintain its position on the sea. And if there is any lesson of the 20th century, and especially of the past few years, it is that in spite of the advances in space and in the air, strategic air, this country must still move easily and safely across the seas of the world."

"The sea is a friend and an enemy," Jack Kennedy once said. It is appropriate that 10-year-old Caroline Kennedy, the sponsor, on May 27, 1967 smashed a bottle of champagne across the bow of the John F. Kennedy to christen the ship.

THROTTLEBOTTOM NO MORE

In normal circumstances, nominations will be made for the Republican candidacy for Vice President on Thursday (Aug. 8).

ALEXANDER THROTTLEBOTTOM, in the musical Of Three I Sing, had been nominated by the simple process of putting a number of names on slips in a hat and pulling one out. Throttlebottom didn't win; he lost -- that is, is had his name drawn.

The first Vice President, John Adams, called his job "the most insignificant office that ever the invention of man contrived." Some Vice Presidents of the 19th century, nominated for geography rather than talent, were so obscure that their names are remembered today only by cross-word puzzle nuts.

The vice presidential nominee usually "balances" the ticket geographically. Thus Warren of California ran with Dewey of New York in 1948, Bricker of Ohio with Dewey in 1944, Nixon of California with Eisenhower -- adopted by the Eastern Establishment -- in 1952 and 1956, John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson in 1960.

OFTEN THE VICE PRESIDENTIAL NOMINATION goes as reward for help toward the presidential nomination -- Garner with F. D. Roosevelt in 1932. But often it represents an attempt to heal a breach or to reconcile antagonistic elements -- Bricker, a Taft leader, with Dewey in 1944; Robinson, Southern Dry, with Smith, Tammany West, in 1928.

In recent years the nominee for President has expressed his choice for the V.P. candidacy and the convention has approved. Gen. Eisenhower and a group of his close advisers in 1952, for example, agreed on Sen. Richard M. Nixon (Calif.) for the No. 2 spot on the ticket and the convention quickly confirmed their choice. Similarly, the 1960 conventions quickly accepted the designations by the respective nominees of Lyndon B. Johnson and Henry Cabot Lodge for the vice presidency.

But as recently as 1956 the Democrats fought over the Veep nomination after the presidential nominee, Adlai E. Stevenson, declared a hands-off policy in the contest for his running mate. Sen. Estes Kefauver (Tenn.) was nominated on the second ballot after a close race with Sen. John F. Kennecy (Mass.).

THE MODERN RESURRECTION of the vice presidential office from obsecurity, if not impotence, had faint beginnings in Woodrow Wilson's second term. While the President was at the Paris Peace Conference, he authorized Vice President Thomas R. Marshall to preside over Cabinet meetings.

Calvin Coolidge said he had been immeasurably helped in the Presidency by having sat in on some sessions of President Hardin's Cabinet. However, Hoover's advisers in 1928 dropped the Coolidge co-pilot, Vice President Charles G. Dawes. Loius Clinton Hatch has observed: "President Coolidge is said never to have forgiven him (Dawes) for his absence from the Senate when his casting vote might have saved the nomination of Charles B. Warren as Attorney General from defeat."

President Eisenhower on March 8, 1957, told the press that Vice President Nixon was "one of the comers in the Republican party ... young, vigorous, healthy and certainly deeply informed." Yet on Aug. 24, 1960, asked what Nixon had contributed to decision-making, Ike said: "If you give me a week, I might think of one."

Martin Van Buren was the last Vice President (so far) to become President except through the death of the Chief Executive. But eight times the Vice President has become President. Today the nomination for Vice President of either party would scarcely be considered beneath any worthy man. Throttlebottom, who mournfully wanted to go to his "slick" home town, Topeka, is only a memory.

The sock of the Kremlin bloc countries' invasion of Czechoslovakia isn't what it was 20 years ago. It does reveal that the essential nature of Communism as an unyielding, unreasonable, bloody, dishonest, dictatorial, rigid and inflexible force is essentially unchanged.

It was a cat and a mouse game that the Russians played on Czechoslovakia, culminating with the unexpected and brutal invasion of the unhappy country.

It is obvious that Russian Communism permits no slight deviation from the party line and that even the smallest freedoms will not be tolerated.

Russia cannot be trusted by friend or foe alike. No one was more surprised by the invasion than the leaders of Czechoslovakia, who had just gone through the window dressing routine of receiving leaders of Soviet bloc countries in a series of state visits.

The negotiations were merely a deceptive implication that Russia would be content to work out an accomodation over the table instead of at gunpoint.

Those who believed that Czechoslovakia's immediate troubles were over after the visits didn't reckon with the desperation and insecurity of the Kremlin rulers.

Even though a small breath of freedom has been savagely cut in Czechoslovakia, the United States must continue to try to work wherever possible with Russia to keep the peace of the world.

The threat of nuclear war makes this essential.

President Lyndon B. Johnson's offer to go to Russia after the invasion are ill advised and poorly timed.

This is a time when Russia's hand should not be strengthened voluntarily by the United States.

A presidential visit to Russia now would be playing a propaganda game directly into the hands of the Soviet Union.

The message that all countries under Russian domination including Czechoslovakia, would get from the visit would be that as far as the United States is concerned all is forgiven.

All isn't forgiven but there is little that the United States can do to help the liberty loving Czechs now except to give them vocal support and avoid fraternizing or knuckling down to the Russians.

Hal Boyle

NEWYORK (AP) -- Sidewalk comments of a Pavement Plato:

Are we flooding our schools with the wrong people?

We are sending our kids there. Might it not be better if the grownups went?

This month some 57 million young people will inundate U.S. kindergartens, classrooms and campuses. Many of them profess a reluctance, since it is "the thing" to do.

"Gee, vacation is so much fun I hate to think of going back to school," said my daughter, Tracy, who is 15 and is secretly rather proud that she'll be a high school sophomore.

"I wish I could go in your place," I told her.

"You must be kidding," she said, unbelieving.

But I wasn't kidding at all. Millions of middle-aged Americans, I am sure, have a wishful yearning to return for a refresher course in the groves of academe.

George Bernard Shaw once said it was too bad youth had to be wasted on the young. The same thing might be said about education.

"Civilization is a race between education and catastrophe," once observed H. G. Wells. This remark is often ridiculed now by our precocious youth as just another pompous platitude from one of yesterday's fuddy-duddies.

But many grown ups have a feeling of desperation that their own education is hardly sufficient to avert the catastrophe.

The sheepskin they won years ago, if they did win one, has hardly proved a passport to safety. They have merely, at the best, staved off catastrophe. Once they, too, were "the hope of tomorrow," but today a younger generation bitterly blames them for the pickle the world finds itself in.

They survived a terrible business depression, two great world wars and innumerable smaller conflicts. Yet civilization, dwelling uneasily under the Damocletian sword of atomic extermination, seems in greater danger than ever.

The average middle-aged man doesn't feel educated. He feels woefully ignorant. He hasn't had much time to campaign for a better world. He has been too busy earning a living, keeping his kids out of jail, and paying off mortgages.

Now, with many of the best years of his life behind him, he suddenly finds himself something of a stranger in the world he lives in. Knowledge has passed him by. Incessant change has riddled many of his firmest beliefs, raised doubts even as to the verity of his God.

"I'm darned if I really know what I am sure about," said one such man. "Everything I learned in school seems to be out-of-date or wrong. I'd give anything to go back to school and start getting educated all over again."

Certainly, if given the chance, most middle-aged men wouldn't waste the opportunity. Perhaps it would be a good idea if every high school graduate, before going on to college, were forced to spend a year in the School of Hard Knocks, and his father given a sabbatical 12-month in a university discovering what the New Knowledge is all about.

It would be a real education experience for both son and dad, and at the end of it there would be less nonsense about "the generation gap" that yawns between them. Each would be wiser and understand the other better.

Isn't it worth a trial? There would be no lack of middle-aged volunteers.

A MATTER OF VIEWPOINT

Former Alabama governor George Wallace is beginning to worry Democrats and Republicans alike the way he is winning friends and influencing voters with his no-nonsense promise to chastize the dissidents and restore respect for law and order in America.

Wallace, it will be remembered, was the man who once literally "stood in the schoolhouse door" to defy the law of the land on the amtter of integration and whose campaign speeches carry the implication that the order of the courts on the same issue will be ignored should he become president.

Law and order. Like beauty, its meaning is in the beholder whose eye is getting poked.

GIANTS BATTLE:
Reuther Launches New Civil War Inside Labor

Washington, D. C,: -- Walter Reuther, having served his time in Chicago like the rest of us, celebrated his 61st birthday last Sunday by proving that he still was sufficiently young in heart to take a whack at the politics of confrontation.

It was easy. The rusty-haired maverick simply declared war on other labor giants. The struggle could be bloodier than the battles of Lincoln Park. Reuther simply crossed labor's Rubicon by tearing up his nonagression pact with the million-member International Assn. of Machinists (IAM), one of George Meany's favorite unions.

So strongly fraternal towards the IAM is AFL-CIO president Meany, that he hedge-hopped for it it as he never has for any other organization.

Last week Meany waited in Chicago just long enough to get Hubert Humphrey's telephone call early Thursday, Aug. 29, during which the Vice President confided to the cigar-chewing number one union chief that Sen. Ed Muskie would be the vice presidential candidate.

Meany was delighted. He then took a train east. Monday morning, the labor prexy marched with Mr. Humphrey, sat alongside him in the reviewing stand for several hours, and then raced for a plane back to Chicago.

There he spoke at the massive Machinist convention in the Conrad Hilton. For those who know of Meany's distaste for travel, this was a great demonstration of solidarity with Machinists' president Roy Siemiller -- now Walter Reuther's prime target.

On this labor beat you can insult a man tohis face and walk away unbloodied. But you don't raid his territory unless you want open war.

Well, Reuther has begun invading the Machinists' territory. The auto union has joined with the Teamsters in a raid on the Machinists' jurisdiction over the McDonnell Douglas aircraft plant in St. Louis. There are more than 21,000 members at stake. For years the Machinists have had them under contract at the Phantom jet plant there. Now Reuther seeks to dump the Machinists union from this, one of IAM's biggest, most famous installations.

This is civil war. It will spill over into the West Coast aerospace industry where both unions have major contracts. There will be counter raids by the Machinists and their allies.

And Reuther knows these are not flabby allies. Not the least of them is that one-man "stonewall" Paul Hall, the Seafarers' International Union chief. Hall can whip up a storm, orate like an old-style medicine man, argue like a college-bred transportation economist, a swear like an infuriat cleaver-wielding gallery go He's used all these techniques President Johnson, several Wh House aides, scores congressmen - and especially Walter Reuther and Jim Hoffa.

Though it has gone unnoti during the current political h it was Paul Hall who pulled Chicago taxi strike right sm during the Democrats' natio convention, though he's one Mr. Humphrey's most act supporters and heavi contributors.

That was the strat moment for Hall's Chicago t union to strike. So it did. P Hall plays it hard. He's had He's been theprime target of communist underground and mob's underworld. He fou Hoffa all the way from Pue Rico to California, and beat h

We'll know better during week of Sept. 16 where all feuding is heading. On Monday the AFL-CIO command gathers in New Y City for its late summer sess

Washington - Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON SAY: TV spotlighting of Chicago violence was deliberate; Networks resented expense of Miami-Chicago move; Provocation of police by militants was ignored

WASHINGTON--This is a column which will make a lot of TV executives sore. It may also make some viewers skeptical about the TV coverage of the recent Chicago convention.

We attended both political conventions and witnessed violence in both Miami and Chicago. Outside agitators came to both cities to foment trouble that they hoped would attract the spotlight and tarnish the U.S. image.

Anyone who watched the two conventions on television might think that chicago was exploding with violence while Miami was comparatively peaceful.

Yet in Miami, six persons were killed, and the riot area was put under curfew. In Chicago, sniper fire was reported, but only one policemen was wounded. A bullet also thudded into a bus. The outbreaks never became serious enough to require a curfew.

After the Miami convention we reported that the TV networks, angry over the $3 million it was costing them to pull up their cables and transfer everything to Chicago, intended to retaliate by focusing attention on Democratic "disturbances."

The networks got their revenge, in Chicago they played up the violence which they had virtually ignored in Miami. They complained about tight security restrictions, which, incidentally, had also been imposed by the Republican convention. They sought out the dissidents and featured them while the Democratic orators were expounding.

TELEVISION'S JOB

This raises two important questions about the role of TV at the Democratic convention.

1. Did the TV cameras help incite the violence? There is little doubt that the provocations were planned largely for the benefit of television. We stayed at the Conrad Hilton Hotel, which was the center of most of the trouble. During the disturbances we mingled with the hippies and yippies. We found almost no action outside the circle of the TV Kleig lights. Aside from some shouting and surging, little was happening in the darkness.

2. Did the TV networks make news? There is evidence that the TV networks, perhaps in their eagerness to generate high ratings for TV sponsors, encouraged dissidents to make inflammatory statements and helped to stir up controversies. When the networks sell convention time to cigarette and oil sponsors for several million dollars, they have to keep up the viewing interest. One way of doing this is to pick fights, stimulate excitement, interrupt dull speeches and roll calls. Once, the sound was switched on before the cameras focused on a TV newsman about to interview a prominent Democrat. The interviewer was overheard coaching his subject: "Let's keep this Kennedy story going."

The TV networks also presented an outrageously biased picture of the events in Chicago. They gave the impression, for instance, that the police were beating up innocent young people who had come to Chicago for peaceful demonstrations.

Certainly, the police were too zealous in swinging their billy clubs, and a lot of innocent people were hurt.

HIPPIE HECKLERS

But the TV networks scarcely mentioned the provocations that finally made the police lose their tempers. The hippies shouted obscenities, hurled rocks and bottles, sprayed police with caustic chemicals, damaged police cars and generally defied police orders.

One group tore down the American flag and tried to raise a communist flag in its place. Other agitators waved red flags and North Vietnamese flags. A couple of demonstrators slammed a huge chunk of cement through the window of a police car. Others stoned police cars, tossed cherry bombs and stink bombs, smashed windows, broke into liquor stores.

Jerry Rubin, the yippie leader, cried through a bullhorn for violence against the police, whom he called "pigs." Black panther leaders, taking the stump in Lincoln Park, urged the demonstrators to break up into small groups and go on a rampage through Chicago's loop. Other agitators made speeches that sounded like radio Hanoi and radio Peking.

The same night that police began cracking heads, 70 policemen were also injured. Several officers had to be hospitalized. By the end of the convention week, 118 officers had been hurt.

This was a side of the story that the TV networks largely ignored. They had hundreds of newsmen and cameramen in Chicago who should have been able to get the facts. The two of us, operating alone, easily dug out the full story.

Indeed, we reported in advance what was in store for the Democrats in Chicago. We had studied government intelligence reports which warned that the militants planned a deliberate provocation of the police on the two most important nights of the convention.

We reported that the leaders ranged from communists and anarchists to sincere pacifists. They were directed loosely by the national mobilization committee to end the war in Vietnam. The co-chairmen are Dr. Sidney Morris Peck, a former communist, and David Dellinger, a pacifist who has been to Hanoi and is an apologist for Ho Chi Minh.

We reported on August 25: "The committee has trained a group of militant demonstrators to attempt a 'crash-in' to break into the convention amphitheater. They will be directed by marshals carrying walkie-talkies. Calls have gone out for medics to give first aid to the demonstrators and electronic experts to operate the radio equipment.

This was published three days before the first violence. It all happened exactly on schedule. And the TV networks showed it all exactly as they had threatened.

The Gospel Visitor

By REEDUS M. BUAGHER

In this lesson I would like to raise a question, and answer it. What is the gospel? The one Paul said he and others preached. (Gal. 1:8; 1 Cor. 15:1-4; 2 Cor. 4:3; Rom. 1:16) There could be other Scriptures used showing that it is a definite article. And surely can be explained in definite terms, since God will take vengeance on them who refuse to obey it. (2 Thessalonians 1:8).

The word "gospel" used in the inspired writings, is composed of two words. One meaning good or glad, and the other meaning news or tidings. So simply it means good news or glad tidings. Thus, it is true that the gospel means "good news." But it is equally true that all good news is not the gospel. Since the gospel is relative to man's salvation, in order for the good news to be the gospel or part of it, it must in some way be related to salvation. There is a great deal of good news which is not the gospel spoken of in the Scriptures. Paul says, in Romans 1:16, that the gospel is God's power to save. Not implying that it limits God's power to the gospel, but informing all to the fact that God's power to save, is embodied, in the gospel.

In the fifteenth chapter of first Corinthians, Paul, after saying he had preached the gospel to them in that city, preceeds to state in a summary way what he had preached, saying, "Christ died, was buried, and arose the third day according to the Scriptures." Here are cetain great facts concerning Christ, His death, burial, and resurrection. Yet these facts, important as they are, do not constitute the full and complete gospel. It was not his purpose to make a statement of the entire gospel in this place. He mentions fundamental facts, but there is more in this gospel than its wonderful facts. For we read of the obedience of the gospel, and facts cannot be obeyed. In order to obedience there must be commands. But facts and commands are not all, for we read of the hope of the gospel, and hope rests upon promises. If there is no promise there is no ground for hope. The gospel must, therefore, contain promises. These, then, are the essential parts of the gospel of Christ, facts, commands, promises. (Rom. S:24,25; 16:26; 2 Pet. 1:4

The order in which I have named them is their logical, Scriptural order. And our relation to each of these is different. Facts are to be believed, commands are to be obeyed, promises are to be enjoyed. The order of the process in us also corresponds to the order of the parts of the gospel. First faith in the facts, then obedience to the commands, next rejoicing in the promises. Much of the confusion which manifestly exists concerning this matter, is to be attributed either to the fact that this order is not observed, or that a part only is presented for the whole. Were I to undertake to produce joy without first producing faith and obedience, that upon which the joy legitimately rests, I would produce confusion. Or were I to preach of the exceeding great and precious promises, without showing how enquires are to appropriate these, I need not be surprised to find that I have bewildered those whom I should have guided along a plain way. How simple was the gospel as preached at first, and how easily understood! Next week we will consider the facts, commands, and promises of the gospel.

The Gospel Visitor

By REEDUS M. BUAGHER

In this lesson I would like to raise a question, and answer it. What is the gospel? The one Paul said he and others preached. (Gal. 1:8; 1 Cor. 15:1-4; 2 Cor. 4:3; Rom. 1:16) There could be other Scriptures used showing that it is a definite article. And surely can be explained in definite terms, since God will take vengeance on them who refuse to obey it. (2 Thessalonians 1:8).

The word "gospel" used in the inspired writings, is composed of two words. One meaning good or glad, and the other meaning news or tidings. So simply it means good news or glad tidings. Thus, it is true that the gospel means "good news." But it is equally true that all good news is not the gospel. Since the gospel is relative to man's salvation, in order for the good news to be the gospel or part of it, it must in some way be related to salvation. There is a great deal of good news which is not the gospel spoken of in the Scriptures. Paul says, in Romans 1:16, that the gospel is God's power to save. Not implying that it limits God's power to the gospel, but informing all to the fact that God's power to save, is embodied, in the gospel.

In the fifteenth chapter of first Corinthians, Paul, after saying he had preached the gospel to them in that city, preceeds to state in a summary way what he had preached, saying, "Christ died, was buried, and arose the third day according to the Scriptures." Here are cetain great facts concerning Christ, His death, burial, and resurrection. Yet these facts, important as they are, do not constitute the full and complete gospel. It was not his purpose to make a statement of the entire gospel in this place. He mentions fundamental facts, but there is more in this gospel than its wonderful facts. For we read of the obedience of the gospel, and facts cannot be obeyed. In order to obedience there must be commands. But facts and commands are not all, for we read of the hope of the gospel, and hope rests upon promises. If there is no promise there is no ground for hope. The gospel must, therefore, contain promises. These, then, are the essential parts of the gospel of Christ, facts, commands, promises. (Rom. S:24,25; 16:26; 2 Pet. 1:4

The order in which I have named them is their logical, Scriptural order. And our relation to each of these is different. Facts are to be believed, commands are to be obeyed, promises are to be enjoyed. The order of the process in us also corresponds to the order of the parts of the gospel. First faith in the facts, then obedience to the commands, next rejoicing in the promises. Much of the confusion which manifestly exists concerning this matter, is to be attributed either to the fact that this order is not observed, or that a part only is presented for the whole. Were I to undertake to produce joy without first producing faith and obedience, that upon which the joy legitimately rests, I would produce confusion. Or were I to preach of the exceeding great and precious promises, without showing how enquires are to appropriate these, I need not be surprised to find that I have bewildered those whom I should have guided along a plain way. How simple was the gospel as preached at first, and how easily understood! Next week we will consider the facts, commands, and promises of the gospel.

Indians Open September 21

CAPE GIRARDEAU--The highlight of the first full week of fall football practice at Southeast Missouri State College will come Friday (Sept. 6) with a limited scrimmage game, Head Coach Tom Thrower said today.

Thrower, starting his first season as the Indians' chief, said the game will be the first of two scrimmage contests before Cape State opens its schedule Sept. 21 at Delta State College in Cleveland, Mississippi.

Forty-six returnees and 30 freshmen reported for practice last week and ran through three days of light conditioning and running exercises. It was Labor Day before they dressed out in pads and really got down to the business of football.

After their first contact work on Monday, the athletes scrimmaged Tuesday night and more of the same was on tap.

The head coach plans twice daily workouts through next Tuesday (Sept. 10) and he is already singing the blues as he prepares the Indians to defend their Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association conference title.

Twelve seniors are gone from that championship squad, and a starting offensive guard, Terry Coff, did not return this fall.

Two other top prospects are also out for the season due to knee injuries. They are Doug Mackey, who had been counted on for considerable duty at a linebacking spot, and Roger Roethe, a leading contender at tackle.

Several other players are also on the doubtful list at the moment because of various ailments.

Still, there are 10 starters, including six all-conference selections, among the 22 lettermen back from last fall.

The five first stringers on offense who are on hand again this season are Roger Combs, John Diepenbrock, Walt Smallwood, Don Giannola, and Bruce Hoffman. Returning defensive regulars are Jim Bland, Van Hitt, Steve Jerabek, Tom Critchlow and Gary Kehrer.

"The spirit and attitude of the boys is good, and we hope to have a good season," Thrower said. "But we're thinner than I've ever seen us at the tackle and linbacking positions, and we'll be in trouble if we get other injuries at Key positions."

Thrower, 30, succeeded Ken Knox as head coach of the Cape State Indians. Knox resigned last spring after 16 seasons and six conference titles to devote full-time to his duties a sathletic director.

The new coach, who played under Knox and later was an assistant on his staff, is being assisted this year by Ryland (Ductch) Meyr on offense and Ken Hargens and Jim Hamby on defense.

Thrower said he does not plan any basic changes in the Indians' style of play.

"We threw a lot last season and we plan to continue to throw the ball," he said.

To be successful at this, Thrower must find a replacement for quarterback Greg Brune, the only missing member of last season's offensive backfield.

Top candidates for the slot are Al Poelker, Greg Schroeder, and Mark Calandro.

By Ron Jaynes

There are two things that the Sikeston baseball program is in great need of! First Sikeston needs an additional baseball field, so that more boys can participate and second, the commissioner form of each league needs to be abolished and a group of interested citizens should be in charge of all leagues and monies.

This past season saw a great need for assistance. The Babe Ruth All-Stars and the Connie Mack baseball teams found themselves in a financial bind. This could possibly have been avoided if all the city leagues monies had been in one fund. League workers had to go out to the merchants and ask for a helping hand.

A new Babe Ruth field would provide for an additional 90 boys to participate in either the 13-15 division or the 16-18 division.

The commissioners have done excellent jobs while running their respective leagues, but with the administration of such a big program as Sikeston has, it puts one person in a bind, where a commission could meet each week and discuss problems or needed repairs at the parks.

Now that New Madrid, Portageville, Lilbourn, Matthews and Parma are all in one school district it sets up a fine situation with the high schools remaining where their are atpresent.

With such a district, the New Madrid county R-1 school district could set up intramural programs in baseball, track, basketball, volleyball and football, establishing a program that would benefit the district, if and when a new school would be built.

Such an program would give more physical fitness opportunities to boys and girls.

Memphis State Top Pick

KANSAS CITY AP - Providing Coach Billy Murphy succeeds in plishing his passing game, Memphis State is a good bet to succeed in its first shot at the football championship the pass-minded Missouri Valley Conference.

The Valley might be called the home of the bomb. In this league the practice has been to pass first and run only if you have to or as a surprise weapon.

Tulsa and Glenn Dobbs with a long string of gifted throwers and catchers lead the nation in passing yardage for an unprecedented five straight years. Then Texas El-Paso, coached by Glenn's brother, Bobby Dobbs, won the national crown last year. Tulsa was second at 263.9.

Valley champion North Texas was eighth with 223.6, and the Steve Ramsey-to-Ron Shanklin sophomore combination was the nation's best in scoring.

Every team in the Valley gained more yards in the air than on the ground. Memphis State, which rushed for 1,682 and passed for only 795, ruined an unbeaten North Texas record in the final game, 29-20.

"North Texas was a little flat that day," Murphy says. "They will be ready for us this year at Denton, and we catch them right after Mississippi and Tennessee."

The winner of that one still must contend with Tulsa. Dobbs warns, "We'll pass more this year ans we'll do it better - we'll have to."

Tulsa threw 389 passes last year but Dobbs contends "we committed ourselves to the run to often."

Louisville's offense, led by a talented run-pass quarterback, Wally Oyler, and skittery tailback Herbie Phelps, worries the other Valley coaches. But the defense is a question mark.

Homer Rice warns that his second Cincinnati team could be the surprise of the Valley. Wichita State is rebuilding under Eddie Kriwiel.

North Texas won't have the surprise element this year and Coach Rod Rust lost four outstanding men from his "Mean Green" defensive unit. But the 1968 defense could be just as mean, if 6-foot-4, 274-pound Joe Greene can avoid ankle troubles.

Tulsa's defense is potentially the best Dobbs had had. Quarterback Mike Stripling, a good passer and dangerous runner, should have a big year if a summer leg injury doesn't bother him.

Don't look for Memphis State to pass a lot, but Murphy concedes "we will have to throw and catch a lot better than we did this spring."

Little Ricky Thurow hit 46 per cent last year with just one interception. Those figures doubtless would please Murphy, who has a dangerous tailback in Nick Pappas and another tough defense.

Rice started last year by taking off 1,400 pounds of fat from his squad. Now they are regaining lost strength and their new weight is in muscle. An example is tackle Butch Foreman, once 270 pounds, who played at 218 and is now a strong and quick 245.

Cincy's defense should be much improved. The offense is led by tailback Lloyd Pate and passes Greg Cook.

Wichita has a strong defense, but it had to play most of the way last year. Kriwiel promises a balanced offense. He might do it, if his good-looking newcomers give tailback KennyLee enough help.

Bengals Open AFL Season

By The Associated Press

Cincinnati will find out if a couple of preseason surprises mean anything in the first playfor-keeps match, while the prestige of the venerable National Football League is at stake in a couple of games that don't mean anything this weekend.

In a quirk of scheduling, the expansion Bengals open the American League campaign at San Diego tonight before most of the other pro teams wrapup exhibition activity.

The Bengals, rated two touchdown underdogs in the game to be nationally televised by the National Broadcasting Co. at 8:30 p.m., pulled off a couple of upsets in their last two exhibtions—beating Pittsburgh and the New York Jets.

Two other AFL openers also are on tap during the weekend. Boston is at Buffalo Sunday, while two top threats—Kansas City's Western Division runners-up and Houston's defending Eastern titlists—meet at Houston Monday night, both games will be televised nationally by NBC.

In addition, there are 10 exhibitions Friday night and Saturday—including two interleague tests. And, the NFL will have to win both to accomplish a little face saving.

Because of Joe Namath's injured knee, Detroit, NFL, is favored to stop the New York Jets, AFL, in the first game of a doubleheader at Cleveland Saturday night. But a showdown the same evening between the Atlanta Falcons, NLF, at Miami, AFL, is reated a toss-up.

Three NFL exhibitions are scheduled Friday night: Minnesota vs. New Orleans at Shreveport, La., St. Louis at Chicago and San Francisco at Los Angeles.

Green Bay's champions collide with the Browns in the second game of the doubleheader at Cleveland Saturday night, wile New York plays Philadelphia in the afternoon at Princeton, N.J.; Baltimore is at Dallas, and Pittsburgh plays Washington at Norfolk, Va.

Denver meets Oakland at Portland, Ore., in an AFL exhibition Saturday night.

Tiger Number At 14 Cards Trimmed to 7

Detroit and St. Louis resume their pennant chases tonight with the Tigers home against the Minnesota Twins and the Cardinals hosting the San Francisco Giants for a twi-night doubleheader.

The Tigers, enjoying an eight game bulge, in the American League, have 21 games to play —the same numberas pursuing Baltimore. That means the magic number for Detroit to clinch its first pennant since 1945 is 14. Any combination of 14 Tiger victoris and-or Oriole losses will wrap it up for Detroit.

The National League Cardinals are 13½ games in front of second place San Francisco and have the same record as the Tigers—89-52.

St. Louis, with 21 games remaining, has a magic number of seven to clinch its second consecutive flag.

In the only game played in the majors Thursday, the Chicago White Sox nipped Washington 21.

Indians Open September 21

CAPE GIRARDEAU–The highlight of the first full week of fall football practice at Southeast Missouri State College will come Friday (Sept. 6) with a limited scrimmage game, Head Coach Tom Thrower said today.

Thrower, starting his first season as the Indians' chief, said the game will be the first of two scrimmage contests before Cape State opens its schedule Sept. 21 at Delta State College in Cleveland, Mississippi.

Forty-six returnees and 30 freshmen reported for practice last week and ran through three days of light conditioning and running exercises. It was Labor Day before they dressed out in pads and really got down to the business of football.

After their first contact work on Monday, the athletes scrimmaged Tuesday night and more of the same was on tap.

The head coach plans twice daily workouts through next Tuesday (Sept. 10) and he is already singing the blues as he prepares the Indians to defend their Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association conference title.

Twelve seniors are gone from that championship squad, and a starting offensive guard, Terry Coff, did not return this fall.

Two other top prospects are also out for the season due to knee injuries. They are Doug Mackey, who had been counted on for considerable duty at a linebacking spot, and Roger Roethe, a leading contender at tackle.

Several other players are also on the doubtful list at the moment because of various ailments.

Still, there are 10 starters, including six all-conference selections, among the 22 lettermen back from last fall.

The five first stringers on offense who are on hand again this season are Roger Combs, John Diepenbrock, Walt Smallwood, Don Giannola, and Bruce Hoffman. Returning defensive regulars are Jim Bland, Van Hitt, Steve Jerabek, Tom Critchlow and Gary Kehrer.

"The spirit and attitude of the boys is good, and we hope to have a good season," Thrower said. "But we're thinner than I've ever seen us at the tackle and linbacking positions, and we'll be in trouble if we get other injuries at Key positions."

Thrower, 30, succeeded Ken Knox as head coach of the Cape State Indians. Knox resigned last spring after 16 seasons and six conference titles to devote full-time to his duties a sathletic director.

The new coach, who played under Knox and later was an assistant on his staff, is being assisted this year by Ryland (Ductch) Meyr on offense and Ken Hargens and Jim Hamby on defense.

Thrower said he does not plan any basic changes in the Indians' style of play.

"We threw a lot last season and we plan to continue to throw the ball," he said.

To be successful at this, Thrower must find a replacement for quarterback Greg Brune, the only missing member of last season's offensive backfield.

By Ron Jaynes

There are two things that the Sikeston baseball program is in great need of! First Sikeston needs an additional baseball field, so that more boys can participate and second, the commissioner form of each league needs to be abolished and a group of interested citizens should be in charge of all leagues and monies.

This past season saw a great need for assistance. The Babe Ruth All-Stars and the Connie Mack baseball teams found themselves in a financial bind. This could possibly have been avoided if all the city leagues monies had been in one fund. League workers had to go out to the merchants and ask for a helping hand.

A new Babe Ruth field would provide for an additional 90 boys to participate in either the 13-15 division or the 16-18 division.

The commissioners have done excellent jobs while running their respective leagues, but with the administration of such a big program as Sikeston has, it puts one person in a bind, where a commission could meet each week and discuss problems or needed repairs at the parks.

Now that New Madrid, Portageville, Lilbourn, Matthews and Parma are all in one school district it sets up a fine situation with the high schools remaining where their are atpresent.

With such a district, the New Madrid county R-1 school district could set up intramural programs in baseball, track, basketball, volleyball and football, establishing a program that would benefit the district, if and when a new school would be built.

Such an program would give more physical fitness opportunities to boys and girls.

It's the ideal situation. Let's see what can be done.

Tiger Number At 1[4] Cards Trimmed to [7]

Detroit and St. Louis resume their pennant chases tonight with the Tigers home against the Minnesota Twins and the Cardinals hosting the San Francisco Giants for a twi-night doubleheader.

The Tigers, enjoying an eight game bulge, in the American League, have 21 games to play —the same numberas pursuing Baltimore. That means the magic number for Detroit to clinch its first pennant since 1945 is 14. Any combination of 14 Tiger victoris and-or Oriole losses will wrap it up for Detroit.

The National League Cardinals are 13½ games in front of second place San Francisco and have the same record as the Tigers—89-52.

St. Louis, with 21 games remaining, has a magic number of seven to clinch its second consecutive flag.

In the only game played in the majors Thursday, the Chicago White Sox nipped Washington 21.

Foes Renew Effort to Bar Fortas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court pornography decisions and the uncertain impact of the presidential nominations were key factors today as opponents renewed their assault on the nomination of Abe Fortas as chief justice.

Sen. John L. McClellan, setting the stage for today's resumption of Senate Judiciary Committee debate on the nomination, showed three stag party films Tuesday to staff aides of noncommittee senators.

The Arkansas Democrat, presumably trying to drum up support for opposition to Fortas outside the committee, called the films "degrading."

He said they "ought to be shown at a committee hearing and made part of the record."

Fortas, as an associate justice voted with the majority that found two of the films not to be pornography. The vote became a major point in opponents' arguments just before Congress broke Aug. 3 for the political conventions.

Some committee members saw the films then.

McClellan's showing of them Tuesday made it clear that the opposition to President Johnson's appointment of Fortas to succeed Earl Warren has not slackened. Warren has retired contingent upon Senate approval of a successor.

Less obvious as Congress returns to work is the impact on the controversy of Richard M. Nixon's nomination as Republican presidential candidate.

Nixon was one of the earliest to say Johnson should make no nominations until after the election. There have been predictions that his selection as GOP standard bearer will blunt some support of Fortas from Republican senators now more interested in party unity.

Because the opponents have the support of Nixon, some Republican senators are wondering if this will force Sen. Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois to reassess his position.

Dirksen, the Senate GOP leader, strongly supported Johnson's nomination of Fortas when it was submitted. Aides have said lately, however, that Dirksen may be too busy with his own re-election campaign to take an active part in the fight.

Johnson has nominated another old friend and a fellow Texan, U.S. Appeals Judge Homer Thornberry, to succeed Fortas as an associate justice of the Supreme Court if Fortas is confirmed as chief justice.

But the Judiciary Committee has put Thornberry's nomination aside pending Senate action on Fortas' appointment.

Kentucky's Thruston B. Morton is another Republican question mark. He was one of the first to join the opposition, then changed his position and said he'd support Fortas. Now, however, he is working almost fulltime with the Nixon campaign as a top adviser.

Crops Ahead Of Last Year

KANSAS CITY (AP)- Missouri crops generally are making better progress than a year ago, federal and state agricultural experts reported today.

Authorities said about two-thirds of the corn crop is mature enough to be safe from any early frost, compared with only one-third at this time a year ago. Corn harvesting has begun in the southern part of the Missouri Bootheel.

Pods are setting on more than 80 per cent of the soybean crop, and growth was described as good despite a lack of rain, especially in the southeast part of the state.

The grain sorghum crop was described as about half matured and growing about two weeks ahead of last year.

Marginal Students Can Succeed If Given Proper Direction

CANTON--I. C. Little has graduated from high school. His counselors, teachers and parents feel I. C. has the potential to become a college student, but his high school grades show only limited success. Can I. C. get into a good college? If admitted, can this type of student be expected to succeed?

An experiment conducted at Culver-Stockton College has proven that selected marginal students can succeed in college provided that they are given the proper direction.

For the past six years Culver-Stockton has conducted an experimental "Special Service School" for high school students who have the potential for college work, but whose high school achievement has not reflected it. Results of the project have been gratifying.

After careful selection of a maximum of 25 students, based on high school grades, testing programs, recommendations and interviews, the students are enrolled in an eight-week summer session. The session is designed to make the students better prepared for college and to give them a boost that will provide them with a running start for their freshman year--the year when there is the highest number of flunk-outs or drop-outs.

Dr. Ethel Kaump, enthusiastic director of the project since its inception, emphasizes that these students are not rejects or drop-outs. They are students who have the necessary potential, but due to distractions, such as being serviced in a variety of education experiences traveling from school to school, illness or emotional problems, are not ready for school.

'Many have become overloaded in extra-curricular areas which become dominant at the expense of learning skills," says Dr. Kaump. "We give them extensive training in learning skills, without the extra-curricular frills.

The program begins with three weeks of intensive training in which as many distractions as possible are eliminated. Visitors, including parents, are discouraged. Students may not have cars. They study six days a week and join together in planned recreation.

During these three "intensive" weeks, Dr. Kaump and other faculty concentrate strictly on learning skills--reading, listening, writing and investigation. "We ask them to find themselves by testing their ability, and putting themselves through an identifying, searching experience," Dr. Kaump says.

One of the student's early assignments is to write a paper describing who he is and what he is. Most are brutally frank and well aware of their short-comings. Inarticulateness, the inability to communicate, is a common fault and one which Dr. Kaump feels can be greatly helped by this type of program.

Following the three weeks of learning about themselves and developing study skills, the students take courses for college credit and have an opportunity to test their new-found skills. Students can earn up to 8½ hours freshman credit--or they can fail.

The regular college courses are selected to give the student one general education course and one elective course. General psychology has been used as the general education course. "The psychology course is geared to help the students better understand their own behavior as well as that of all human behavior," Dr. Kaump says. Elective courses have included sociology, mathematics and literature. All students take the same elective course.

Most make at least average grades and are then eligible for admittance as regular students at Culver-Stockton, although some choose to attend another college.

And when the fall term arrives, the Special Service School student, who has been successful in completing the eight weeks of concentrated effort, is ready to succeed, armed with new study habits, several hours of credit, and a new confidence.

How successful has the program been? Most of those who complete the summer session enroll for the fall semester. "And about 64 percent of those who enroll in the fall are able to successfully complete their college careers," says Dr. Kaump.

Several students who were admitted to college as part of the Special Service School program later graduated with honors and attended graduate school. One of the early students has begun work on a doctorate degree. Many are teaching.

"This experiment is one example of our college's basic principles and motivations which is to help people achieve their highest potential," says Dr. Fred Helsabeck, Culver-Stockton president.

"The results of the program over six years indicates that it has been quite successful. We have been pleasantly surprised with the number of graduates coming from this group."

Dr. Helsabeck also expressed gratitude to Dr. Kaump, who was recently named Professor of Education and Psychology, Emeritus, and will continue to head the summer program despite her retirement.

'We owe special appreciation to Dr. Kaump for directing the program for six years and for her offer to return and continue to head the program as long as the demand for it continues," Dr. Helsabeck said.

In summing up the success of the program, the president said, "This program indicates that personal motivation, improved self-image, and minimal aid in learning skills are very important factors in effective learning."

Those select students who failed to meet Culver-Stockton's regular requirements, but through the Special Service School may achieve a college education, are proof that the I. C. Littles can succeed with proper guidance.

Travelers Checks Believed to Be Counterfeit

CAIRO-A large quantity of shredded travelers checks found on route 3 in Alexander county apparently are counterfeit, Sheriff Chesley Willis said.

Highway crewmen and sheriff's deputies gathered up enough small pieces to half fill a large cardboard box. The pieces were strewn over an area near the Cache Diversion bridge.

Mixed with the checks were Social Security cards, drivers licenses, birth certificates and other types of forms, all believed to be counterfeit.

The checks were in the amounts of $100 and it was estimated that they would total nearly $25,000 if pieced together.

Sheriff Willis said they managed to reconstruct several of them and noticed that all the serial numbers were identical and closer examination gave other indications of their being worthless.

The hundreds of pieces of shreeded papers evidently were tossed from an auto before they were noticed by the county highway crew working in that vicinity.

Weather to Be Warm, Rainfall Normal

By Leonard F. Hand
Agricultural Meteorogist

PORTAGEVILLE - The 30-day weather outlook for September indicates that Southeast Missouri farmers can look for warmer then normal temperatures and near normal rain.

The favored track for high pressure centers crossing the continent will extend across the northern tier of the United States. High pressure over the southeast corner-of the country will continue to feed warm air over the lower Mississippi Valley with sufficient regularity to offset occasional intrusions of cool air from the north. Average temperatures over the month is expected to run above normal for this time of year.

The major track of low pressure centers affecting the mid-south is likely to run from the Great Plains to the Great Lakes region, north of the Bootheel. Most rain is likely to come in showers and thundershowers generated by cold fronts that extend south from the storm centers.

Normal rain for the Bootheel during September is 3.41 inches. Normals for individual cities are: Cape Girardeau 3.73 inches, New Madrid 3.42 inches, Caruthersville 3.03 inches, Parma 3.36 inches, Dexter 3.74 inches, Poplar Bluff 3.45, Doniphan 3.53, Sikeston 3.70 inches and Morehouse 3.43 inches.

Short term averages for other locations are: Advance 2.90 inches, Kennett 2.53 inches, Bernie 2.94 inches, Malden 2.57 inches, Bloomfield 2.90 inches, Portageville, 2.55 inches, Charleston 2.42 inches, Puxico 2.89 inches, Clearwater Dam 2.78 inches, Qulin 2.55 inches, Deering 2.10 inches and Wappapello Dam 2.45 inches.

Long term records indicate the following average rainfall for September with near normal precipitation: Poplar Bluff 3.82 inches, Sikeston 3.92 inches and Caruthersville 3.66 inches. Total monthly rain over that period during Septembers falling in the near normal category ranged from 3.18 to 4.38 inches at Poplar Bluff, from 3.48 to 4.30 at Sikeston and from 3.20 to 4.45 inches at Caruthersville.

The above normal temperature trend is likely to maintain favorable conditions for defoliation beyond the usual period this season. Missouri University Cotton defoliation recommendations indicate that leaf drop is slowed and is less complete when minimum temperatures drop below 60 degrees. Rain within 4 to 6 hours after applications doesn't reduce effectiveness of the chemical, according to the MU Guide.

Dry weather in a number of spots over the Bootheel will reduce the urgency for bottom defoliation since ballrot symptoms are not showing up in absence of high humidity in the lower plant zone. Low soil moisture, sometimes coupled with mite infestations, has already prompted some leaf drop. In sections where rain was more plentiful, or where the crop was irrigated regularly, daily forecasts and five day weather outlooks should be helpful in determining the schedule of defoliants. Where possible, applications should be made at a time when sunny, warm weather will follow, since cloudy, rainy weather causes poor leaf drop.

To maintain the quality of cotton, producers are reminded of the damage that may develop when cotton is picked with long delays before ginning. To play it safe, hold back until dew is off the lint in the morning, and discontinue harvesting when dew forms in the evening. Daily agricultural advisories predict the occurrence and intensity of dew and the time when dew will dry each morning. Keep in mind that dew formations are more likely and will be heavier in those sections where water has been plentiful. When the harvest is well in progress, daily bulletins will be issued from the ESSA Weather Bureau Agricultural Service Office to Bootheel radio stations linked to the ESSA Weather Wire. These bulletins will include condition of cotton that morning, weather conditions affecting drying, and the recommended time during the day when harvesting will hield maximum quality.

The extreme variability in rain during the past month is shown by the following totals reported by ESSA Weather Bureau stations in the Bootheel for August: Caruthersville 0.77 inches, Kennett 1.71 inches, Malden 3.70 inches, Charleston 1.15 inches, Poplar Bluff 7.43 inches, Sikeston 3.07 inches, Portageville 1.46 inches and University of Missouri Experimental Farm 0.82 inches. Unless rain during September provides more even distribution of moisture before harvest starts in earnest, quality harvesting schedules will vary considerably from dry to wet locations.

Above normal temperatures are expected to maintain moisture stresses on late crops until rainfall brings relief to soybeans. Irrigation made a big difference in dry areas this season, and additional applications may pay off on beans if shower distribution is no better than in past weeks.

Corn harvest, now underway, may be slowed by occasional showers, but it would take considerable moisture to make some of our dry fields impassible for any length of time. Where grain is to be dried after harvest, farmers should pick times during the day when relative humidity is below 65% if unheated air is to be used. This will occur by mid forenoon on good drying days, and moisture rises rapidly toward sunset on our cool, fall days.

Power Line Authorized For Noranda Complex

JEFFERSON CITY-Reauthorization to install a large power line across Current River toserve expanding Bootheel industry has been granted by the Missouri Public SerCommission, it was announced Tuesday.

The state agency, for the second time, has authorized the Sho-Me Power Corp. to install a 161,000-volt power line across Current River in a secotion of the Ozark National Riverway to serve Southeast Missouri lead mines and to provide temporary power for the new Noranda industrial complex at New Madrid.

The USC order permits Sho-Me to move the crossing point about one mile below the Round Spring State Park to a new site about one mile above the park. Permission had been granted last year to cross Current River and build lines through the Ozark Riverway area, an 81,000-acre scenic region, by he state commission. It was later suggested by the U.S. Department of Interior that the crossing site be changed and the case before the state agency was reopened.

Conservation forces fought the proposed power line crossing, while development groups in the Bootheel favored it because of the demand for increased power for industrial purposes in this area. Some opposition groups sought the support of Lt. Gov. Thomas F. Eagleton, who suggested in a letter to the Department of Interior that perhaps another crossing could be found. True Davis, a Senatorial primary opponent of Eagleton, injected the issue in last month's campaign and called for approval of the crossing.

The PSC ruling was 5-1 in favor of the crossing. The lone dissenter was Howard Elliott, Jr., a Republican member of the commission. Voting for the location change were PSC chairman William Clark and commissioners Marvin E. Jones, a former Dexter resident, Charles J. Fain and Wilard Reine.

The PSC order become effective tomorrow. The crossing will be a part of a 115-mile line running from Norfolk dam in Arkansas through Willow Springs to an eastern terminus at the new $33 million Ozark Lead Co. mine in western Reynolds County. The plant itself will be served by the Arkansas-Missouri Power Co.

An official of the Sho-Me Corp. told The Daily Democrat that the line would also be used to supply temporary power for the aluminum processing plant, to be built by the Noranda Corp., south of New Madrid. A $500 million power complex will eventually be built at New Madrid to supply Noranda's needs.

Caltech Entry Named Electric Car Race Victor

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Great Electric Car Race has ended with the California Institute of Technology entry the winner by a wire-thin margin.

The judges in the cross-country race, the editors of Machine Design magazine, met nearly 10 hours Wednesday before awarding first place to Caltech's battery-powered Volkswagen Microbus.

Clare Wise, one of the judges, said Caltech's car with a correct elapsed time of 210.3 hours was 30 minutes ahead of the converted Chevrolet Convair driven by students from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Both cars will be exhibited at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington The MIT car was flown there by the Air Force.

The race began at noon, Aug. 26. Both cars traveled the same 3,300-mile route, but in opposite directions.

The Caltech car arrived at the MIT campus in Cambridge, Mass., at 7:46 a.m. Wednesday. MIT's entry arrived at the Pasadena, Calif., campus of Caltech at 6:27 p.m. Monday.

Penalties were assessed for such things as towing. Wise said the MIT car was towed several times, including the last 130 miles after its motor burned out.

The MIT car had a $20,000 nickel cadmium battery. Caltech's car was powered by 20 lead cobalt batteries costing $600. Both cars used direct current traction motors.

MIT's team was headed by Len Loeb, 20, of Corpus Christi, Tex. Waley Rippel, 23, of Hollywood, Calif., headed the Caltech team and dreamed up the race to call public attention to the potential of electric propulsion.

Marginal Students Can Succeed If Given Proper Direction

CANTON--I. C. Little has graduated from high school. His counselors, teachers and parents feel I. C. has the potential to become a college student, but his high school grades show only limited success. Can I. C. get into a good college? If admitted, can this type of student be expected to succeed?

An experiment conducted at Culver-Stockton College has proven that selected marginal students can succeed in college provided that they are given the proper direction.

For the past six years Culver-Stockton has conducted an experimental "Special Service School" for high school students who have the potential for college work, but whose high school achievement has not reflected it. Results of the project have been gratifying.

After careful selection of a maximum of 25 students, based on high school grades, testing programs, recommendations and interviews, the students are enrolled in an eight-week summer session. The session is designed to make the students better prepared for college and to give them a boost that will provide them with a running start for their freshman year--the year when there is the highest number of flunk-outs or drop-outs.

Dr. Ethel Kaump, enthusiastic director of the project since its inception, emphasizes that these students are not rejects or drop-outs. They are students who have the necessary potential, but due to distractions, such as being serviced in a variety of education experiences traveling from school to school, illness or emotional problems, are not ready for school.

"Many have become overloaded in extra-curricular areas which become dominant at the expense of learning skills," says Dr. Kaump. "We give them extensive training in learning skills, without the extra-curricular frills.

The program begins with three weeks of intensive training in which as many distractions as possible are eliminated. Visitors, including parents, are discouraged. Students may not have cars. They study six days a week and join together in planned recreation.

During these three "intensive" weeks, Dr. Kaump and other faculty concentrate strictly on learning skills--reading, listening, writing and investigation. "We ask them to find themselves by testing their ability, and putting themselves through an identifying, searching experience," Dr. Kaump says.

One of the student's early assignments is to write a paper describing who he is and what he is. Most are brutally frank and well aware of their short-comings. Inarticulateness, the inability to communicate, is a common fault and one which Dr. Kaump feels can be greatly helped by this type of program.

Following the three weeks of learning about themselves and developing study skills, the students take courses for college credit and have an opportunity to test their new-found skills. Students can earn up to 8½ hours freshman credit--or they can fail.

The regular college courses are selected to give the student one general education course and one elective course. General psychology has been used as the general education course. "The psychology course is geared to help the students better understand their own behavior as well as that of all human behavior," Dr. Kaump says. Elective courses have included sociology, mathematics and literature. All students take the same elective course.

Most make at least average grades and are then eligible for admittance as regular students at Culver-Stockton, although some choose to attend another college.

And when the fall term arrives, the Special Service School student, who has been successful in completing the eight weeks of concentrated effort, is ready to succeed, armed with new study habits, several hours of credit, and a new confidence.

How successful has the program been? Most of those who complete the summer session enroll for the fall semester. "And about 64 percent of those who enroll in the fall are able to successfully complete their college careers," says Dr. Kaump.

Several students who were admitted to college as part of the Special Service School program later graduated with honors and attended graduate school. One of the early students has begun work on a doctorate degree. Many are teaching.

"This experiment is one example of our college's basic principles and motivations which is to help people achieve their highest potential," says Dr. Fred Helsabeck, Culver-Stockton president.

"The results of the program over six years indicates that it has been quite successful. We have been pleasantly surprised with the number of graduates coming from this group."

Dr. Helsabeck also expressed gratitude to Dr. Kaump, who was recently named Professor of Education and Psychology, Emeritus, and will continue to head the summer program despite her retirement.

"We owe special appreciation to Dr. Kaump for directing the program for six years and for her offer to return and continue to head the program as long as the demand for it continues," Dr. Helsabeck said.

In summing up the success of the program, the president said, "This program indicates that personal motivation, improved self-image, and minimal aid in learning skills are very important factors in effective learning."

Those select students who failed to meet Culver-Stockton's regular requirements, but through the Special Service School may achieve a college education, are proof that the I. C. Littles can succeed with proper guidance.

Travelers Checks Believed to Be Counterfeit

CAIRO-A large quantity of shredded travelers checks found on route 3 in Alexander county apparently are counterfeit, Sheriff Chesley Willis said.

Highway crewmen and sheriff's deputies gathered up enough small pieces to half fill a large cardboard box. The pieces were strewn over an area near the Cache Diversion bridge.

Mixed with the checks were Social Security cards, drivers licenses, birth certificates and other types of forms, all believed to be counterfeit.

The checks were in the amounts of $100 and it was estimated that they would total nearly $25,000 if pieced together.

Sheriff Willis said they managed to reconstruct several of them and noticed that all the serial numbers were identical and closer examination gave other indications of their being worthless.

The hundreds of pieces of shredded papers evidently were tossed from an auto before they were noticed by the county highway crew working in that vicinity.

Weather to Be Warm, Rainfall Normal

By Leonard F. Hand
Agricultural Meteorogist

PORTAGEVILLE - The 30-day weather outlook for September indicates that Southeast Missouri farmers can look for warmer then normal temperatures and near normal rain.

The favored track for high pressure centers crossing the continent will extend across the northern tier of the United States. High pressure over the southeast corner of the country will continue to feed warm air over the lower Mississippi Valley with sufficient regularity to offset occasional intrusions of cool air from the north. Average temperatures over the month is expected to run above normal for this time of year.

The major track of low pressure centers affecting the mid-south is likely to run from the Great Plains to the Great Lakes region, north of the Bootheel. Most rain is likely to come in showers and thundershowers generated by cold fronts that extend south from the storm centers.

Normal rain for the Bootheel during September is 3.41 inches. Normals for individual cities are: Cape Girardeau 3.73 inches, New Madrid 3.42 inches, Caruthersville 3.03 inches, Parma 3.36 inches, Dexter 3.74 inches, Poplar Bluff 3.45, Doniphan 3.53, Sikeston 3.70 inches and Morehouse 3.43 inches.

Short term averages for other locations are: Advance 2.90 inches, Kennett 2.53 inches, Bernie 2.94 inches, Malden 2.57 inches, Bloomfield 2.90 inches, Portageville, 2.55 inches, Charleston 2.42 inches, Puxico 2.89 inches, Clearwater Dam 2.78 inches, Qulin 2.55 inches, Deering 2.10 inches and Wappapello Dam 2.45 inches.

Long term records indicate the following average rainfall for September with near normal precipitation: Poplar Bluff 3.82 inches, Sikeston 3.92 inches and Caruthersville 3.66 inches. Total monthly rain over that period during Septembers falling in the near normal category ranged from 3.18 to 4.38 inches at Poplar Bluff, from 3.48 to 4.30 at Sikeston and from 3.20 to 4.45 inches at Caruthersville.

The above normal temperature trend is likely to maintain favorable conditions for defoliation beyond the usual period this season. Missouri University Cotton defoliation recommendations indicate that leaf drop is slowed and is less complete when minimum temperatures drop below 60 degrees. Rain within 4 to 6 hours after applications doesn't reduce effectiveness of the chemical, according to the MU Guide.

Dry weather in a number of spots over the Bootheel will reduce the urgency for bottom defoliation since ballrot symptoms are not showing up in absence of high humidity in the lower plant zone. Low soil moisture, sometimes coupled with mite infestations, has already prompted some leaf drop. In sections where rain was more plentiful, or where the crop was irrigated regularly, daily forecasts and five day weather outlooks should be helpful in determining the schedule of defoliants. Where possible, applications should be made at a time when sunny, warm weather will follow, since cloudy, rainy weather causes poor leaf drop.

To maintain the quality of cotton, producers are reminded of the damage that may develop when cotton is picked with long delays before ginning. To play it safe, hold back until dew is off the lint in the morning, and discontinue harvesting when dew forms in the evening. Daily agricultural advisories predict the occurrence and intensity of dew and the time when dew will dry each morning. Keep in mind that dew formations are more likely and will be heavier in those sections where water has been plentiful. When the harvest is well in progress, daily bulletins will be issued from the ESSA Weather Bureau Agricultural Service Office to Bootheel radio stations linked to the ESSA Weather Wire. These bulletins will include condition of cotton that morning, weather conditions affecting drying, and the recommended time during the day when harvesting will hield maximum quality.

The extreme variability in rain during the past month is shown by the following totals reported by ESSA Weather Bureau stations in the Bootheel for August: Caruthersville 0.77 inches, Kennett 1.71 inches, Malden 3.70 inches, Charleston 1.15 inches, Poplar Bluff 7.43 inches, Sikeston 3.07 inches, Portageville 1.46 inches and University of Missouri Experimental Farm 0.82 inches. Unless rain during September provides more even distribution of moisture before harvest starts in earnest, quality harvesting schedules will vary considerably from dry to wet locations.

Above normal temperatures are expected to maintain moisture stresses on late crops until rainfall brings relief to soybeans. Irrigation made a big difference in dry areas this season, and additional applications may pay off on beans if shower distribution is no better than in past weeks.

Corn harvest, now underway, may be slowed by occasional showers, but it would take considerable moisture to make some of our dry fields impassible for any length of time. Where grain is to be dried after harvest, farmers should pick times during the day when relative humidity is below 65% if unheated air is to be used. This will occur by mid forenoon on good drying days, and moisture rises rapidly toward sunset on our cool, fall days.

Power Line Authorized For Noranda Complex

JEFFERSON CITY-Reauthorization to install a large power line across Current River toserve expanding Bootheel industry has been granted by the Missouri Public SerCommission, it was announced Tuesday.

The state agency, for the second time, has authorized the Sho-Me Power Corp. to install a 161,000-volt power line across Current River in a secotion of the Ozark National Riverway to serve Southeast Missouri lead mines and to provide temporary power for the new Noranda industrial complex at New Madrid.

The USC order permits Sho-Me to move the crossing point about one mile below the Round Spring State Park to a new site about one mile above the park. Permission had been granted last year to cross Current River and build lines through the Ozark Riverway area, an 81,000-acre scenic region, by he state commission. It was later suggested by the U.S. Department of Interior that the crossing site be changed and the case before the state agency was reopened.

Conservation forces fought the proposed power line crossing, while development groups in the Bootheel favored it because of the demand for increased power for industrial purposes in this area. Some opposition groups sought the support of Lt. Gov. Thomas F. Eagleton, who suggested in a letter to the Department of Interior that perhaps another crossing could be found. True Davis, a Senatorial primary opponent of Eagleton, injected the issue in last month's campaign and called for approval of the crossing.

The PSC ruling was 5-1 in favor of the crossing. The lone dissenter was Howard Elliott, Jr., a Republican member of the commission. Voting for the location change were PSC chairman William Clark and commissioners Marvin E. Jones, a former Dexter resident, Charles J. Fain and Wilard Reine.

The PSC order become effective tomorrow. The crossing will be a part of a 115-mile line running from Norfolk dam in Arkansas through Willow Springs to an eastern terminus at the new $33 million Ozark Lead Co. mine in western Reynolds County. The plant itself will be served by the Arkansas-Missouri Power Co.

An official of the Sho-Me Corp. told The Daily Democrat that the line would also be used to supply temporary power for the aluminum processing plant, to be built by the Noranda Corp., south of New Madrid. A $500 million power complex will eventually be built at New Madrid to supply Noranda's needs.

Caltech Entry Named Electric Car Race Victor

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Great Electric Car Race has ended with the California Institute of Technology entry the winner by a wire-thin margin.

The judges in the cross-country race, the editors of Machine Design magazine, met nearly 10 hours Wednesday before awarding first place to Caltech's battery-powered Volkswagen Microbus.

Clare Wise, one of the judges, said Caltech's car with a correct elapsed time of 210.3 hours was 30 minutes ahead of the converted Chevrolet Convair driven by students from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Both cars will be exhibited at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington The MIT car was flown there by the Air Force.

The race began at noon, Aug. 26. Both cars traveled the same 3,300-mile route, but in opposite directions.

The Caltech car arrived at the MIT campus in Cambridge, Mass., at 7:46 a.m. Wednesday. MIT's entry arrived at the Pasadena, Calif., campus of Caltech at 6:27 p.m. Monday.

Penalties were assessed for such things as towing. Wise said the MIT car was towed several times, including the last 130 miles after its motor burned out.

The MIT car had a $20,000 nickel cadmium battery. Caltech's car was powered by 20 lead cobalt batteries costing $600. Both cars used direct current traction motors.

MIT's team was headed by Len Loeb, 20, of Corpus Christi, Tex. Waley Rippel, 23, of Hollywood, Calif., headed the Caltech team and dreamed up the race to call public attention to the potential of electric propulsion.

Kennett Man Dies of Self Inflicted Shot

KENNETT - William C. Madden, 31, who had been living with his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. D. G. Cash of Kennett route two since April, was found fatally wounded at the Cash home by another sister Mrs. Chloe Davis of Kennett, at 3:10 p.m. Wednesday.

Madden apparently had shot himself in the forehead with a 22 caliber rifle, which was found by his side in his room at the Cash home, according to Sheriff Raymond Scott. Scott said Dr. Quinton Tarver, county coroner, had investigated and there would be no inquest.

The brother-in-law, D. G. Cash, said that he and a helper were working on a cotton picker near the house at the time the shooting incident occurred but did not hear the shot because of noise made by the machine. The sister, Mrs. Davis, drove up to the Cash home and walked in and found her brother seriously wounded. An ambulance was called but Madden was pronounced dead on arrival at Dunklin County Memorial Hospital.

According to the family, Madden was separated from his wife who, along with their two daughters, live in Madison, Ill. They said he had been ill for some time and been unable to work.

His mother, Mrs. Artie Maddox, lives in Kennett.

The body is at McDaniel Funeral Home.

Burglars Strike At Malden

MALDEN - A series of break-ins and thefts hit the southside of Malden this past week, as three firms were burglarized in the same block.

The Southside Liquor Store on Highway 25, South was burglarized Tuesday night and thieves made off with 150 half-pints of assorted whiskey. Entrance to the building was gained through the side door. An attempt to break into the liquor store was made Wednesday night of last week, however the persons responsible were unable to gain entrance through the drive-in window.

Wednesday thieves entered the Marine Gas Station next door to the liquor store. Missing was $115 out of vending machines; 15 cartons of cigarettes; two tires and an electric drill. Entrance was gained through a garage window.

Apparently not satisified, the thieves are believed to have attempted a burglary at Kirksey Motor Co., across the highway. The front door of the firm was broken inot, however it is believed the person, or persons, were frightened in the attempt and left the building before taking any loot. Nothing was reported missing after the break-in was discovered.

The Dunklin County sheriff's department state highway patrol and police are investigating the breakins and thefts.

Citizen's Tip Lead To Powells' Arrest

POPLAR BLUFF - The remaining two suspects sought in the Puxico bank robbery were apprehended Wednesday afternoon by state troopers after a tip was received from a citizen.

The suspects, Robert Lynn Powell, 23, and a woman identified as his wife, Jerilea Espe, Powell, 22, were arrested in a cabin at Ates and Johnnies Resort at New Wappapello. The patrol had received a telephone call telling officers that a red Volkswagen sought in the case was hidden at the rear of a cabin.

Sgt. Jack Pritchard and Trooper Billie Kincade, both of Dexter, were dispatched to the scene and arrested the Powells. They were taken to Butler County Jail.

Powell is wanted on an armed robbery warrant from St. Francois county, charging him with the May 18 robbery of the Bank of Leadwood in that county. He gave a Seattle, address, but is a native of St. Francois county.

The Powells were charged with the Puxico bank robbery by Stoddard County Prosecuting Attorney Paul McGhee of Dexter.

Four other suspects in the $18,000 robbery of the Puxico State Bank were arrested Tuesday afternoon after the bank was held up by three men.

Arrested earlier were Fred Leon Kimble, 27, and his woman companion who said she was Del Irene Swafford, 20. Both gave St. Louis addresses. Also arrested Tuesday were Gary Wayne Harkins, 28, and Doris Lorine Harkins, 21, his wife, or Irondale. The Harkins posted $25,000 bond each and were released from jail Wednesday.

Harkins was arrested by state troopers on a charge of failing to transfer a vehicle license. He was arrested after leaving a local motel, where he and his wife had spent Wednesday night.

Harkins was brought before MagistrateJudge Jack Jolly this morning on the license violation, a misdemeanor charge, and waived arraignments. He posted a $5500 bond and trial on the misdemeanor was set for 2 p.m., Sept. 12.

The Powells, Kimble and Mrs. Swafford were taken to Bloomfield for arraignment on the bank robbery charges and were to be returned to Butler county jail.

Federal, state and county officers continued the search today for the $18,000 in cash taken Tuesday afternoon from the Puxico bank. The loot and possibly the guns used in the robbery are believed to be hidden in the Wappapello Dam area.

Scattered items of clothing believed worn by the robbers, as well as their stocking masks and gloves, have been recovered by citizens and by the officers.

Dirksen Shows No Loss Of Form During Recess

WASHINGTON (AP) — It was a sure sign Congress was back in session. The champion of the marigold, the protector of birds was holding court.

Sen. Everett McKinley Dirksen, Republican minority leader from Pekin, Ill., was perched on a table in the Senate press gallery with a cup of coffee in his hand cigarettes nearby, holding his weekly news conference for the first time in a month.

Tousle-haired and irrepressible as ever, not even a story about a report that he was marked for assassination escaped the wry touch.

"I don't want my head blown off," Dirksen said he told police after one of three reports of threats on his life.

"I've got flowers in bloom and they need me. I've got 65 bird feeders now and the birds need me," he said.

But the news conference, darting as usual from anecdote to reminiscence to hard answers, touched on more than birds, flowers and assassination.

What did he think of chances the Senate would confirm Abe Fortas' nomination as chief justice?

"Not roseate," he intoned.

Did he think President Johnson should withdraw the nomination?

"I don't know what the President should or shouldn't do. I'm not the president. I should be but I'm not."

A search for his views on whether the Senate should return for more business after the elections somehow wandered into an account of how a florists' association gave him a gold rose as an award and the report that his own golden tea roses "are doing beautifully this year."

Kennett Man Dies of Self Inflicted Shot

KENNETT - William C. Madden, 31, who had been living with his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. D. G. Cash of Kennett route two since April, was found fatally wounded at the Cash home by another sister Mrs. Chloe Davis of Kennett, at 3:10 p.m. Wednesday.

Madden apparently had shot himself in the forehead with a 22 caliber rifle, which was found by his side in his room at the Cash home, according to Sheriff Raymond Scott. Scott said Dr. Quinton Tarver, county coroner, had investigated and there would be no inquest.

The brother-in-law, D. G. Cash, said that he and a helper were working on a cotton picker near the house at the time the shooting incident occurred but did not hear the shot because of noise made by the machine. The sister, Mrs. Davis, drove up to the Cash home and walked in and found her brother seriously wounded. An ambulance was called but Madden was pronounced dead on arrival at Dunklin County Memorial Hospital.

According to the family, Madden was separated from his wife who, along with their two daughters, live in Madison, Ill. They said he had been ill for some time and been unable to work.

His mother, Mrs. Artie Maddox, lives in Kennett.

The body is at McDaniel Funeral Home.

Burglars Strike At Malden

MALDEN - A series of break-ins and thefts hit the southside of Malden this past week, as three firms were burglarized in the same block.

The Southside Liquor Store on Highway 25, South was burglarized Tuesday night and thieves made off with 150 half-pints of assorted whiskey. Entrance to the building was gained through the side door. An attempt to break into the liquor store was made Wednesday night of last week, however the persons responsible were unable to gain entrance through the drive-in window.

Wednesday thieves entered the Marine Gas Station next door to the liquor store. Missing was $115 out of vending machines; 15 cartons of cigarettes; two tires and an electric drill. Entrance was gained through a garage window.

Apparently not satisified, the thieves are believed to have attempted a burglary at Kirksey Motor Co., across the highway. The front door of the firm was broken inot, however it is believed the person, or persons, were frightened in the attempt and left the building before taking any loot. Nothing was reported missing after the break-in was discovered.

The Dunklin County sheriff's department state highway patrol and police are investigating the breakins and thefts.

SCHOOL'S OPEN CAMPAIGN BEGUN BY AUTO CLUB

The Missouri Auto Club is launching its 36th annual September School Opening Safety Campaign by reminding motorists that "School's Open — Drive Carefully."

Auto Club Safety Director Tom Reel pointed out that more children than ever before will be making the trek back to the blackboard and books, and that many of them will be attending school for the first time — unaware of the hazards of crossing congested intersections, streets, and highways. "After a summer of fun and play, children sometimes forget to exercise that extra degree of caution when going to and from school," Mr. Reel said. "It's up to the individual motorist to watch for the school bound youngsters."

In emphasizing the need for all drivers to be "child alert" this fall, especially in the vicinity of school and playgrounds, the Auto Club will post 12,000 posters and will distribute 21,000 bumper strips throughout its territory.

Mr. Reel urged all drivers to cooperate with members of the School Safety Patrol in protecting their classmates and pointed out the need for increased safety consciousness on the part of motorists in areas where there are no School Safety Patrols or other means of protection provided to safeguard the school children.

Help make this September the safest back-to-school month ever. Remember "School's Open — Drive Carefully!"

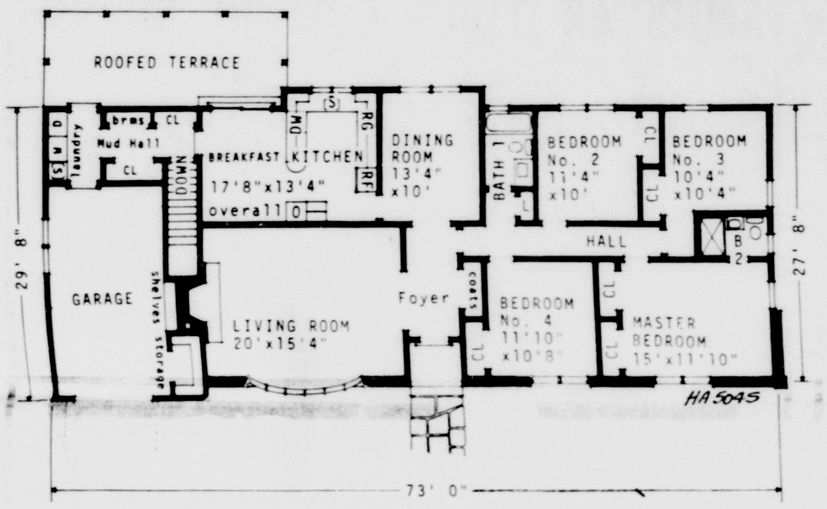
Year-Round Summer

SUMMER IS SLIPPING AWAY but indoors it remains fresh with the use of flowers and plants as decorative touches. This room is a potting "shed" out of the ordinary that extends growing time year-round. Plants are mobile in clay pots, with extra shelves designed for storage to hold repotting supplies. Guests enjoy the outdoor touches while seated on fiberglass furniture with brightly patterned cushions of latex foam.

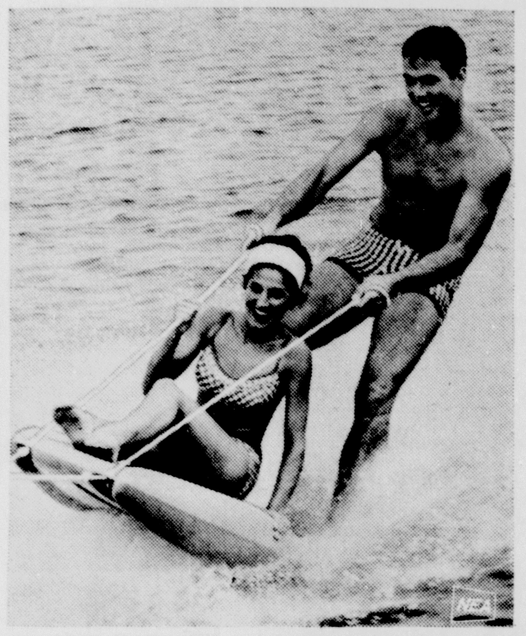
OFF TO WORK goes a hard-hat diver, one of a special group that works underwater repairing ships and docks in the San Francisco Bay area.

BULBOUS BOW of the Queen Elizabeth 2, perched on the ways before launching in Scotland, is designed for stability, but, paradoxically, it is used to contain the ship's store of 13,000 gallons of draft beer.

HOMES FOR AMERICANS



THE FOUR-BEDROOM HOUSEHOLD will enjoy the spacious comfort of this moderate home. A foyer separates the living area and bedrooms. The dining room, kitchen and breakfast room are all in the back. In addition there is a mud hall and laundry behind the garage, with ready access from backyard to kitchen or basement and to and from the garage. A roofed terrace is reached by sliding glass doors in the breakfast room for outdoor entertaining. Plan HA504S has 1,510 square feet. It was designed by Herbert Struppmann, Room 704, 48 W. 48th St., New York, N.Y. 10036.



WATER FUN is enjoyed by Brenda Mitchell and Kent Thaxton, who try aquasledding at Cypress Gardens, Fla. The styrofoam sled travels at about 25 miles an hour.

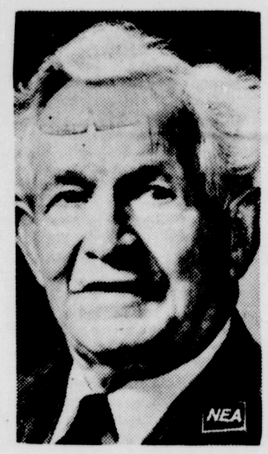
SURROUNDED BY SHIP, it appears that the Statue of Liberty is being carried off. Such is not the case, however, this statue is a plastic and metal replica of the New York landmark. It was made in Rome and brought to the United States as a prop for a new film.

EAR FOR MUSIC is not what inspired "Calamity Jane's" owner to provide the horse with a transistor radio. Bells, firecrackers and shotgun blasts are played over the radio to accustom the horse to loud noises which it is likely to hear during a parade. Six weeks' training are required to ready the animal for parade duty.

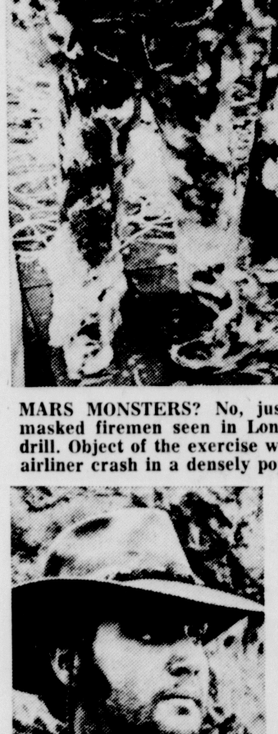
Patterns of Fall

TWO LOOKS FOR FALL—Fashion hemlines can be long, short, or in-between this season. At left, a mini shirtdress in bold red and gray cotton sailcloth takes matching solid-colored shorts. At right, the midi length is depicted in twin cotton prints for an at-home casual. Both outfits are included in the "Cavalcade of Cottons," a loan fashion service sponsored by the Cotton Producers Institute and McCall's Patterns. The complete program-in-a-package is available to women's clubs within the continental United States. New collections featuring 25 all-occasion cottons are offered for fall-winter and spring-summer showings. For information, write the Cotton Producers Institute, P. O. Box 12253, Memphis, Tennessee 38112.

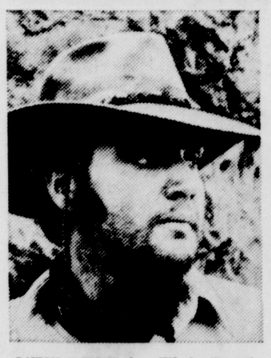
MARS MONSTERS? No, just two foam-covered, gas-masked firemen seen in London during an air-disaster drill. Object of the exercise was fast response to a mock airliner crash in a densely populated area.

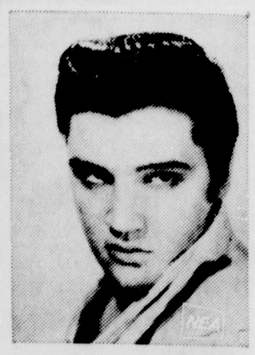


MORMON LEADER David O. McKay, president of the three-million-member world-wide Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, will observe his 95th birthday Sept. 8. Only recently, McKay gave up horseback riding at his mountain ranch home north of Salt Lake City, Utah.



MIGHTY HEAVE from Lizzie Kaufmann sends husband Alex up the mast of a schooner the couple is building in London. Working entirely on their own, the Kaufmanns hope to finish the 55-ton ship by December for a West Indies cruise.





NEW LOOK for Elvis Presley, left, has him bearded and grimy for a western role in an upcoming film. It's a far different image from the one Presley had back in 1960, right, when he was concerned with folk-rock music.

LINED before her time? This model is looking through a new defrosting rear window for automobiles. Narrow strips of a ceramic-metal mixture on the window are heated electrically, quickly clearing fog and mist and assisting in removal of ice and snow. Developed by PPG Industries, the new windows will be available on several 1969 model autos.

CAMERA Angles

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

A new automatic focusing system for home movie cameras and a new approach in making lip-synchronized sound movies by amateur photographers were jointly introduced by Bell & Howell at a recent press preview in New York City.

The ingenious focusing system — called Focus-Matic — uses principles of trigonometry to achieve accurate distance measurements.

The new home movie sound system — called Filmosound 8 — links electronically three basic items of equipment: a movie camera, a cassette tape recorder and a movie projector, to provide lip-synchronized sound to accompany the movies. Though engineered for Filmosound, each unit can be used individually as a conventional piece of equipment to film and show silent movies or to record and play sound.

Focus-Matic is featured in two new super 8mm movie cameras for the Filmosound system. In use, the camera is tilted downward and the movie maker looks at the feet of a person or the base of any subject being photographed so that it coincides with a horizontal line in the viewfinder. By pressing a button, a reading of the distance in feet is recorded on a built-in distance scale.

In Autoload model 442, the button also automatically focuses the lens to the distance measured. Model 436 is manually set to the distance shown and then is ready for movie making.

With Filmosound 8, the words and sounds of home movie subjects are recorded to match precisely with every picture taken by the camera. During projection, every word and sound played back on the tape recorder is matched with every movement on the screen.

It is achieved by teaming the camera and tape recorder as a filming unit and then teaming the tape recorder and projector as a viewing unit. A single cord is all that is required to connect and operate camera and recorder during the filming. Another cord connects recorder and projector.

The sound center of the Filmosound 8 system is a portable cassette tape recorder model 450. It features solid state audio and synchronous electronics, push button operation and automatic or manual volume control for recording. It uses compact four-minute tape cassettes for recording and playback with home movies. These match the filming time for super 8 movie cartridges. The cassette comes in a container with storage space for its matching reel of film.

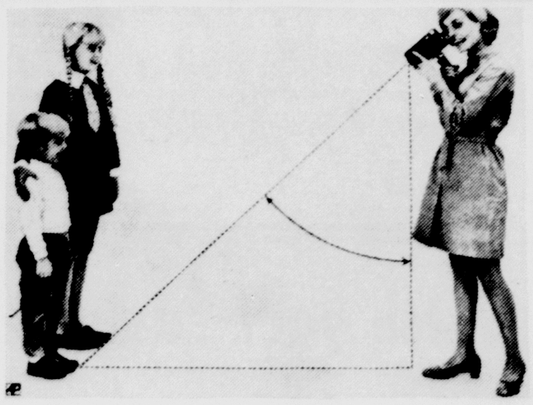
The recorder also accepts standard cassettes which record and play up to two hours.

Projector for the Filmosound 8 system is Autoload model 458 which has dual control to show regular 8mm films as well as super 8.

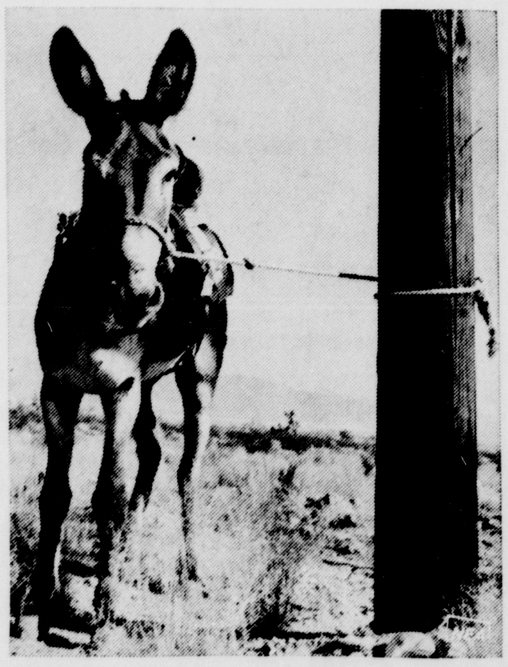
Bell & Howell's unique sound synchronization is attained by a light device in the camera that marks the edge of the film at the beginning of a scene. During filming, sounds from the microphone are recorded magnetically on the audio track of the cassette tape, while an 18-frame-per-second pulsed signal is recorded on the electronic synchronous-control track of the tape.

During projection, the light mark on the processed film controls starting of the tape recorder and the pulsing signal serves as a speed control for the projector, keeping both picture and sound in frame-by-frame synchronization.

Since the cameras, projector and tape recorder in the Filmosound system are priced only slightly higher than comparable conventional equipment, lip-synchronized talking home movies might be within budget reach of average home movie fans. At least, it's another talking point.



NEW FOCUSING SYSTEM for super 8mm movie cameras is introduced by two new Bell & Howell's Focus-Matic cameras. By sighting subject's feet on a horizontal line in the viewfinder, and touching a button, the distance between subject and camera lens is automatically measured. The new cameras are part of a new home movie sound system, also introduced.



CONVENTION BOUND? According to this pole (obviously a roper rather than a gallop), this fellow won't make it to Chicago. Seems he's all tied up.

Romania, which along with Yugoslavia has supported the Czechoslovak liberal leadership, fears it could be the next target for Soviet pressure after the crackdown in Czechoslovakia. While maintaining firm Communist control internally, Bucharest has been increasingly independent of Moscow in foreign policy in recent years.

Ann Landers

Doctor's Careless Talk Causes Mother to Worry

Dear Ann Landers: I hope you can answer a very important question for me. I am unable to eat or sleep and will go out of my mind if I don't learn the truth soon.

Many years ago, when I was 16, I became pregnant. The father was a young fellow I had been dating. He was four years older than I and marriage was not on his mind.

Someone told us that if I took ergot or quinine all our troubles would be over. I was about six weeks along and I tried both, but nothing happened. So we were married a few weeks later. Surprisingly enough, we have been quite happy and now we have five lovely children.

Last month our eldest son complained of backaches. We sent him to a specialist for X-rays and he received the results today. He was told he has two vertebrae missing. The cartilage is there but not the bone. The specialist informed him it is a condition the doctors are expecting in the next generation as a result of LSD and other drugs the hippies are taking. He jokingly asked the boy, "What did YOUR mother do anyway?"

Ann, please tell me if the ergot and quinine I took early in the pregnancy injured this boy. I must know the truth, even if it's the worst. Much obliged. ---LOAD ON MY MIND

Dear Mind: My medical consultants have assured me that ergot and quinine taken during pregnancy does not produce a deformity in the fetus. So stop worrying. (P.S. Someone should give that doctor 10 lashes with an old stethoscope. What a stupid thing to have said to the boy!)

Dear Ann Landers: I am a woman of 68 and I have a rather touchy question to ask. For over 40 years I have been friends with a certain lady who lives in the next block. Agatha tells people she is 73 but she is really much closer to 80.

This woman always wore thick glasses, even as a young person. I am sure her eyesight has failed badly in the last five years. I am also concerned about her deafness. Agatha wears a hearing aid but misses a lot in spite of it. She drives her own car and has been very good about asking me if I want a ride to church, Sewing Circle and club meetings. Sometimes we go visiting or to the movies together.

My children have begged me not to ride with Agatha anymore. They say she is blind and deaf and it's a miracle we haven't had an accident. Frankly, we've had some close calls but we have never actually hit anything or anybody. I would like your candid advice. --- FOUR LEAF CLOVER

Dear Leaf: Don't push your luck, Mother. You've been pretty darned fortunate -- so far.

Level with Agatha and urge her to share your taxi. Explain the situation as gently as you can. Better to lose her friendship than your life.

What is French kissing? Is it wrong? Who should set the necking limits -- the boy or the girl? Can a shotgun wedding succeed? Read Ann Landers' booklet, "Teenage Sex -- Ten Ways To Cool It." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

If You Were the Judge

Woman's Color Choice Not Subject to Law

By Jack Strauss, LL. B.

Clara showed a lot of style and normally her style showed a lot of her. But one dark night, Charley maintained, she couldn't be seen at all. Dressed from top to bottom in black, she was crossing the street when he bumped her with one of the fenders of his automobile. Bouncing into the air, Clara bounced Charley into court where she sued him for her injuries.

"A pedestrian should be seen and not hurt," Clara argued in court.

"That's true," Charley conceded in turn, "but, Clara couldn't be seen. Wearing black clothes on a black night made her invisible. In fact, if anyone was responsible forthe accident, the fault was hers for wearing a black dress on a black night. It was pure carelessness. Therefore, she's not entitled to collect a penny. What's more, she should be made to pay for my dented fender."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit the "invisible" Clara to collect for her injuries?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! He held that, as a matter of law, a woman cannot be deemed careless for choosing to wear a particular color; that for her to wear a black dress on a dark night is not carelessness.

INTERESTING PHONE CALL

Perhaps the most interesting private telephone call of the Democratic convention was received by Vice President Humphrey from Hyannis Port, Mass., on Tuesday, one day before the nominations, just as the Kennedy boom reached its height. Sen. Teddy Kennedy, sole surviving male member of the Kennedy family, was on the line.

"I want to read you a statement I am planning to make," he informed the Vice President.

"Before you read it," replied Humphrey, "I want to say something."

He then told Kennedy of the high regard he had for him and expressed the very sincere hope that he might accept the Vice Presidential nomination.

Sen. Kennedy thanked him but declined. He mentioned his obligation to the Kennedy family, inherited from his late brothers.

Humphrey then said that as his second choice for Vice-President he was considering Sargent Shriver, now ambassador to France and a Kennedy brother-in-law. Humphrey added that he had heard the Kennedy Family had some objections. He said he did not want to pick Shriver if this was the case.

Humphrey did not go into detail, but he had in mind the reported Kennedy line of succession and the opposition of the family to having Shriver get in the way of having Teddy run for President later.

Sen. Kennedy indicated to Humphrey in reply that the Kennedy veto on Shriver had not been withdrawn. He then read the Vice President his statement killing the Kennedy boom for President.

NOTE: Friends of the Kennedy family say that Teddy turned down the Vice-Presidency because his wife pleaded that the Kennedys have enough dead heroes. Cardinal Cushing of Boston, the family spiritual adviser, also counseled Ted not to risk another tragedy.

Other intimates of the family say that Kennedy will pick up the standard of his fallen brothers later. At 37 he believes that he is now too young to become either President or Vice President.

Dear Editor:

We certainly do have problems in our "Liberal"-Socialist State. Now we're in trouble again! The Government only gave the Watts district a four hundred thousand dollar bonus for the latest Riot. Who can say it was not better organized than the first one? Probably wasn't as good on T.V.!!

Now, the Revolutionists will be underpaid, and may not be able to afford private trasportation to Del mar Race Track. Maybe the National Council of Churches will use some of the funds given them be the A.F.L.-C.I.O., and bus them to the track.

Of course, then somebody would have to bus a lot of white people to the track to make racial balance. Than we'd have to bus a lot of rich people to balance with so many poor people.

While some of the top "Liberals" of the country who engineered these problems are in Chicago, let's ask them about the seven and nine tenths million dollar "riot control" fund from which the Watts bonus came?

When they say "Riot Control" do they mean upwards or downwards? Do they mean toward more riots, or less riots? If they give these riot districts a bonus for each riot, they must want more and better riots! Then they must be going by the U.N. Charter instead of the U.S. Constitution. The U.N. Charter gives preference to Human and Rest Room rights, plus Social Change.

If they are going to spread almost eight million dollars in getting bigger and better riots, then we'll run out of country before we run out of money.

Sincerely,
George Spriesterbach

INTERESTING PHONE CALL

Perhaps the most interesting private telephone call of the Democratic convention was received by Vice President Humphrey from Hyannis Port, Mass., on Tuesday, one day before the nominations, just as the Kennedy boom reached its height. Sen. Teddy Kennedy, sole surviving male member of the Kennedy family, was on the line.

"I want to read you a statement I am planning to make," he informed the Vice President.

"Before you read it," replied Humphrey, "I want to say something."

He then told Kennedy of the high regard he had for him and expressed the very sincere hope that he might accept the Vice Presidential nomination.

Sen. Kennedy thanked him but declined. He mentioned his obligation to the Kennedy family, inherited from his late brothers.

Humphrey then said that as his second choice for Vice-President he was considering Sargent Shriver, now ambassador to France and a Kennedy brother-in-law. Humphrey added that he had heard the Kennedy Family had some objections. He said he did not want to pick Shriver if this was the case.

Humphrey did not go into detail, but he had in mind the reported Kennedy line of succession and the opposition of the family to having Shriver get in the way of having Teddy run for President later.

Sen. Kennedy indicated to Humphrey in reply that the Kennedy veto on Shriver had not been withdrawn. He then read the Vice President his statement killing the Kennedy boom for President.

NOTE: Friends of the Kennedy family say that Teddy turned down the Vice-Presidency because his wife pleaded that the Kennedys have enough dead heroes. Cardinal Cushing of Boston, the family spiritual adviser, also counseled Ted not to risk another tragedy.

Other intimates of the family say that Kennedy will pick up the standard of his fallen brothers later. At 37 he believes that he is now too young to become either President or Vice President.

Dear Editor:

We certainly do have problems in our "Liberal"-Socialist State. Now we're in trouble again! The Government only gave the Watts district a four hundred thousand dollar bonus for the latest Riot. Who can say it was not better organized than the first one? Probably wasn't as good on T.V.!!

Now, the Revolutionists will be underpaid, and may not be able to afford private trasportation to Del mar Race Track. Maybe the National Council of Churches will use some of the funds given them be the A.F.L-C.I.O., and bus them to the track.

Of course, then somebody would have to bus a lot of white people to the track to make racial balance. Than we'd have to bus a lot of rich people to balance with so many poor people.

While some of the top "Liberals" of the country who engineered these problems are in Chicago, let's ask them about the seven and nine tenths million dollar "riot control" fund from which the Watts bonus came?

When they say "Riot Control" do they mean upwards or downwards? Do they mean toward more riots, or less riots? If they give these riot districts a bonus for each riot, they must want more and better riots! Then they must be going by the U.N. Charter instead of the U.S. Constitution. The U.N. Charter gives preference to Human and Rest Room rights, plus Social Change.

If they are going to spread almost eight million dollars in getting bigger and better riots, then we'll run out of country before we run out of money.

Sincerely,
George Spriesterbach

By POLLY CRAMER

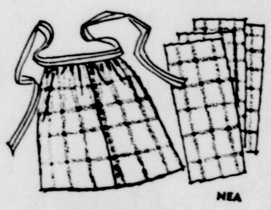
DEAR POLLY—I like to keep books that I read often in my bedroom and like to have pretty bookends for them. Since there are small children around the house they are not safe. I made myself an attractive book holder they cannot break. I took a wire coat hanger pushed down on the hook until both top and bottom wires were about even, spread them apart about three inches, and then bent both curving ends up a few inches. I decorated mine with artificial flowers and it looks very pretty on my desk or a table.—PEGGY

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—How do you and the other girls use up odds and ends of bias tape?—HAZEL

DEAR POLLY—I have a solution to the problem: "Could someone please tell me if paper white narcissus bloom more than once? If so, how would one care for the bulbs to get them to bloom again?" I am 12 years old and got the answer out of an encyclopedia. It said: "In general, the garden species succeed best in well-drained garden soil of medium texture and richness. The bulbs should be planted in the autumn, about five inches deep and three inches apart. They should not be disturbed until they appear to be failing, perhaps about three years. Then, when the foliage has died down, the clumps may be dug up, divided, cleaned and stored in a cool place until planting time."—ROBERT

DEAR POLLY—I want to tell Enda that my nursery man says that bulbs which have been forced (indoor planting) should not be forced again. My birthday is in January and every year my husband gives me new paper white narcissus bulbs which are planted among pebbles in a shallow pottery planter. After they have bloomed and the leaves dried naturally, I put them in the basement to dry out for replanting in the garden when the ground thaws. So you see they do bloom again but not in the house. I do hope Edna has as much success with her bulbs as I have had during past years. —D. W. A.



DEAR POLLY—For an unusual and practical wedding shower gift, I buy six matching dish towels and sew two of the towels together, lengthwise, and gather the top edge onto a tape or ribbon band to make an apron. The apron and four matching dish towels make a gift anyone is pleased to receive. —MRS. E. J. P.

DEAR POLLY—Ladies like Gladys who have to buy long underwear so husbands can wear those scratchy suits probably find the cotton knits with long legs fit so close to the skin that they are too warm except in cold weather so my man prefers the long cotton pajama pants. I have even bought extra ones, without tops, through a catalogue. Great savings! —CAROL

The word vaccination stems from the Latin "vacca," meaning "a cow," because Edward Jenner was the first to discover and make use of inoculation among farm workers who had developed cowpox, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

Flag Raising

Community Affairs Agency Makes Strides Under Bollinger

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Department of Community Affairs is still in its infancy but under the direction of W.T. Bollinger of Van Buren its impact is beginning to be felt around the state.

The agency started as the Office of Urban Affairs and was later transformed into the Office of State and Regional Planning and Community Development before assuming its present form.

It is an entirely new department, filling one of the vacant spots left by the late Gov. Phil M. Donnelly under the 1945 Constitution to cover just such a contingency.

Its acting director is an intense, wiry man who served in the house with Gov. Warren E. Hearnes. He has fired some personnel, shifted others and has tried to revitalize the agency, which has had its troubles at times in its brief existence.

One of its biggest jobs is to act as go-between for local city and county officials and the federal government. The proliferation of federal programs has been so great that most cities would never find out what could be done with federal grants and loans without this liaison agency.

Heading the Office of Governmental Services is H. Randolph Halsey, who plans a series of meetings around the state to "stimulate interest and awareness of federal - state services available to meet local problems."

The first of the 15 meetings will be held at Joplin Sept. 15.

As Bollinger puts it, "we will take the federal and state programs to the people. The people will decide what programs—if any—they want to pursue. This is a grass roots effort to wipe away the red tape in assistance programs and to let the communities themselves initiate their future development."

In one of its recent projects, department aided Kansas City officials in planning the development of the new Kansas City International Airport there.

Larry E. Gridley, director of planning consulted with Kansas City officials, whom he knew as a former staff member of the Kansas City Metropolitan Planning Commission and a planner for the Air Force in Kansas City.

Within days, the governor presented a check for $25,000 to the Kansas City Planning Commission as state help in the project.

Still being developed is Missouri's part under the new Crime Control and Safe Streets Act.

Charles A. Gallipeau, chief counsel for the department and former Jackson County assistant prosecuting attorney, and Col. E. I. Hockaday, superintendent of the Missouri Highway patrol, have put their heads together on this problem. Gallipeau recently attended a two-day conference on the subject held by the Council of State Governments and the Justice Department in Washington.

As a result, Missouri was one of the first states to seek federal aid under the new law.

One of the devices being used to channel federal funds to local communities is the formation of regional planning commissions. Missouri stands near the top in this effort with 13 regions organized and five more in the planning stage.

This work is handled by Hurshel E. Crass, former mayor and police judge of Van Buren. He flies his own plane and often visits a dozen communities within a week.

One of the projects of which Bollinger is proudest is the training of 34 high school graduates this summer in an engineering "crash course" at the University of Missouri's Rolla campus.

All were chosen from Kansas City and St. Louis poverty areas. They were trained as aides to professional engineers and most found jobs with starting salaries up to $4,000 a year.

It is believed to be the first such program where government reached into ghetto areas, took youths to college and found them promising jobs after training them. The extension service of the university and the Department of Community Affairs joined forces on this project.

Bollinger believes the department also has contributed to a "cool" summer in St. Louis. One of its men, William Patrick Magee, was assigned to work with social and welfare officials to help keep St. Louis youths occupied.

The department also has an office working on problems of aging but its program is still in the beginning stages.

Thus far the legislature has not provided any funds or methods to deal with pressing urban problems but the department is expected to be in the forefront if and when such programs are approved.

Bollinger has expressed strong opposition to mere "handout" programs. His idea is to clear the way for cities and people to help themselves.

"We've got a working organization," he says, "and there is no place we can go but up. We want to make Missouri a better place in which to live, and we are on the right road."

ROAD TO IMPROVEMENT

PORT ELIZABETH, South Africa (AP) — Bus firm manager Rollo Dickson felt his company needed some livening up, so he put this slogan on one of his buses: "As comfortable as your car, these new buses — even on Heugh Road."

Heugh Road was known as one of the roughest in the city. Apparently the city council took note, because Heugh Road now has a smooth new surface.

And the new slogan on Dickson's bus reads: "Now every bit as comfortable as your car, these new buses — especially on Heugh Road. Thank you, Mr. City Engineer!"

Revised Plans Submitted For I-57 Cairo Bridge

CAIRO - The Illinois and Missouri highway department have submitted revised plans to the commander of the Second Coast Guard district at St. Louis for the I-57 bridge to be built across the Mississippi River at mile 7.5 near Cairo.

The revised plans provide for a fixed highway bridge with two navigation spans. The main span would provide a clear horizontal opening of 800 feet above elevation 322.0 feet m.s.l., two per cent flood flowline. The auxiliary span would provide a clear horizontal opening of 500 feet between the piers with a minimum vertical clearance of 55 feet above the two percent flood flowline.

The original plans, which were rejected by the coast guard in May, called for a horizontal clearance of 650 feet in the main channel span and 450 feet in an adjacent auxiliary span. A minimum vertical clearance of 55 feet above water elevation exceeded two percent of the time would have been provided in the main channel span; with vertical clearance of 48.6 feet in the adjacent auxiliary span. The American Waterways Operators, Inc., obejected to both the horizontal and vertical clearances provided in the original plans, stating that wider navigational openings in the bridge were needed to handle present and projected river traffic.

Comments on the revised plans are to be submitted to the Commander, Second Coast Guard District, St. Louis by Sen. 26.

The six true grain plants, or cereals, of the world are corn, wheat, barley, rice, oats and rye.

Air Cushion Vehicle Tests To Begin Soon

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The nation's first tracked air cushion vehicle is expected to begin test run within six weeks at Warren, Mich.

The target date is Oct. 1, according to Howard R. Ross, manager of advanced planning studies for Transportation Technology, a division of Sverdrup & Parcel and Associates, Inc. of St. Louis.

Ross disclosed the target date and some details about the vehicle at the opening session Wednesday of the ninth annual meeting of the Transportation Research Forum.

Ross said the vehicle wil be powered by a linear induction electric motor, is designed to carry five persons and will be tested over a track, or a guideway, 160 feet long.

The linear induction electric motor was described by some engineers at the meeting as "the leading candidate for the propulsion system of the future.

It involves a coupling of magnetic force between elements in the track and the car and provides a propulsion, which theoretically has hardly any speed limitation.
